Acte I

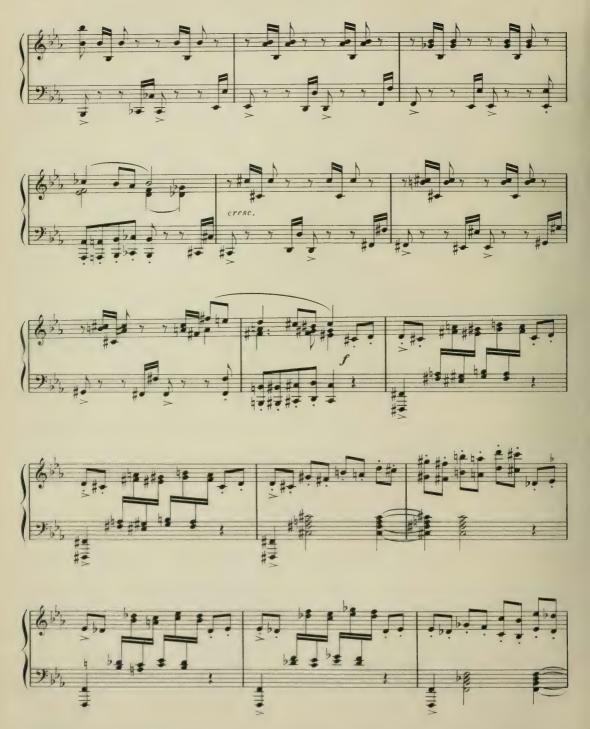

Prélude

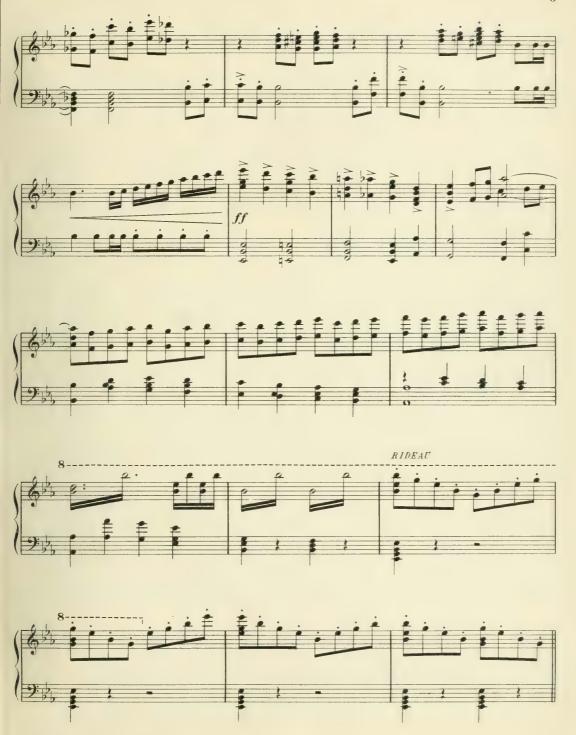

Tous droits dexecution reserves.

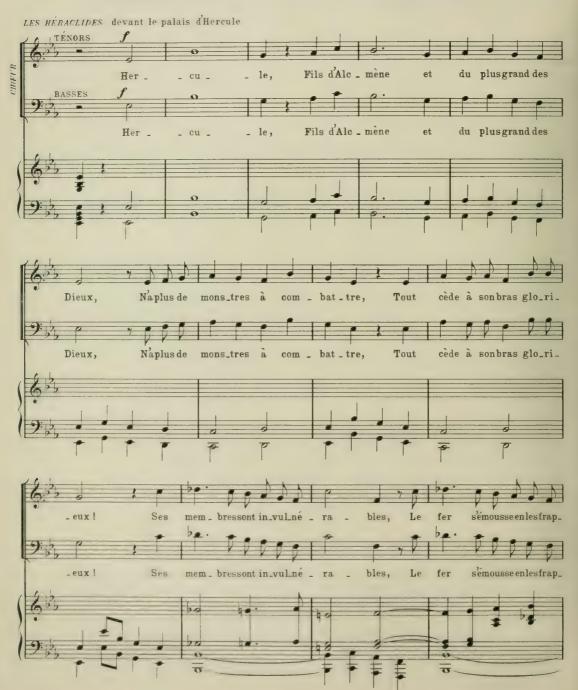

Copyright by Durand & Cie 1910.

I

Le Paluis d'Hercule, à Echalic. A droite le gynécée. Devant, une esplanade. On accède au palais par quelques marches. Au fond, une échappée par où l'on aperçoit des montagnes qui se détachent sur un ciel clair. On est au centre de l'Acropole, sur une hauteur.

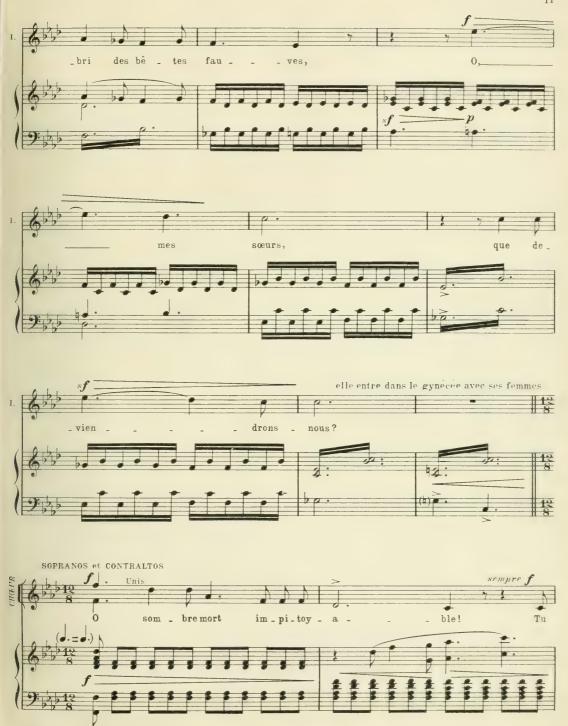

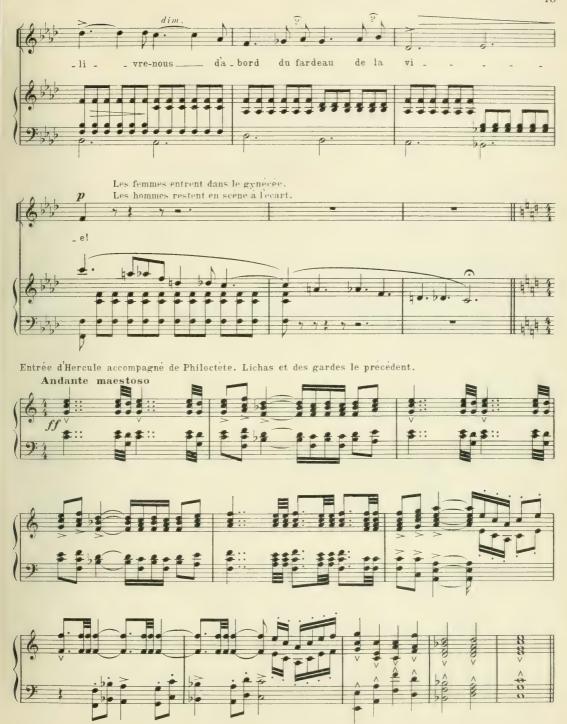

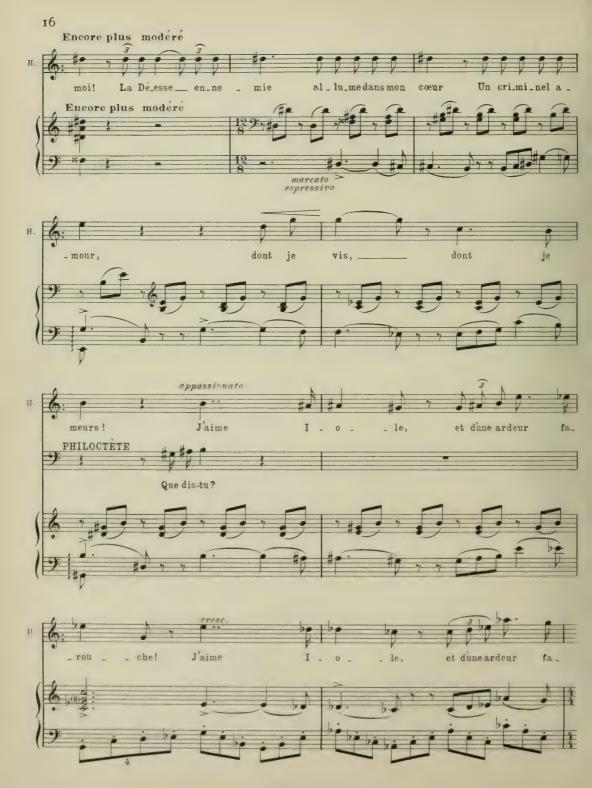

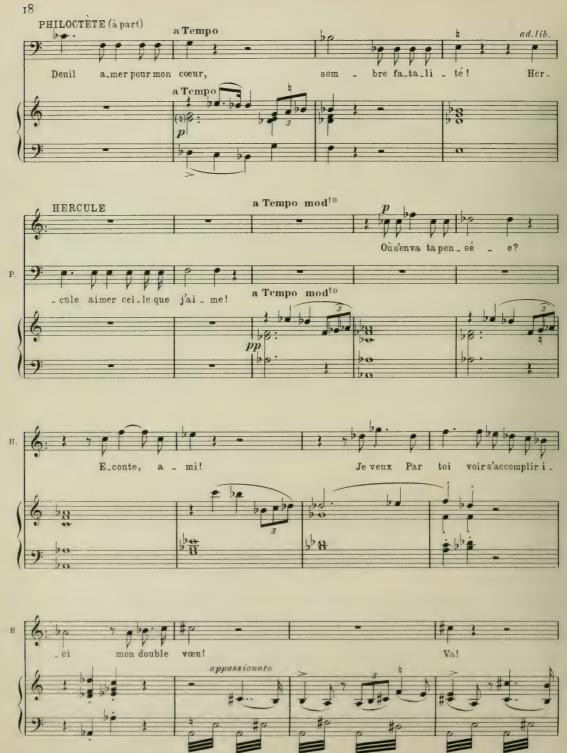

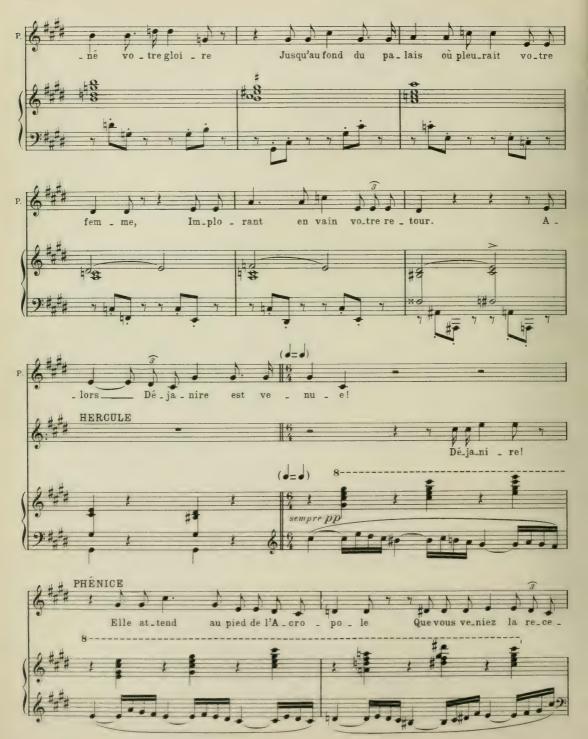

Phénice paraît, très vénérable. Ses longs cheveux blancs encadrent son visage pâle, où rayonnent, ardents encore, ses grands yeux profonds. Elle marche d'un pas ferme; deux serviteurs l'accompagnent et s'arrétent à distance, tandis qu'elle vient vers Hercule.

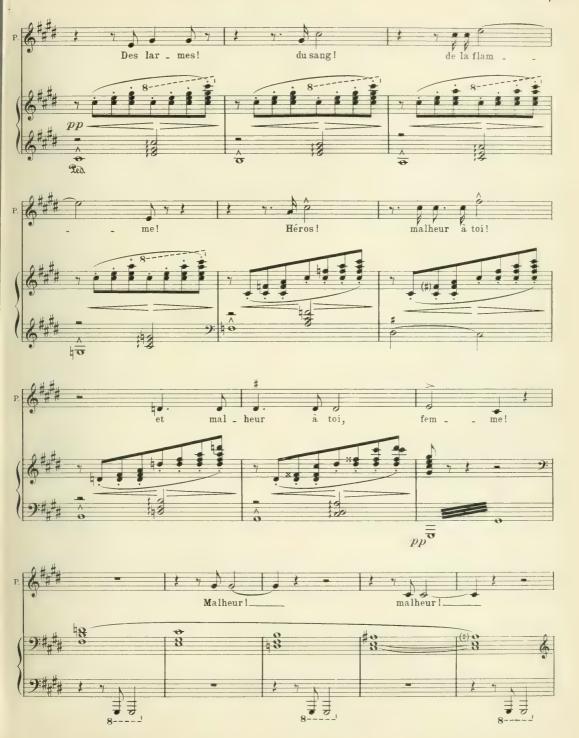

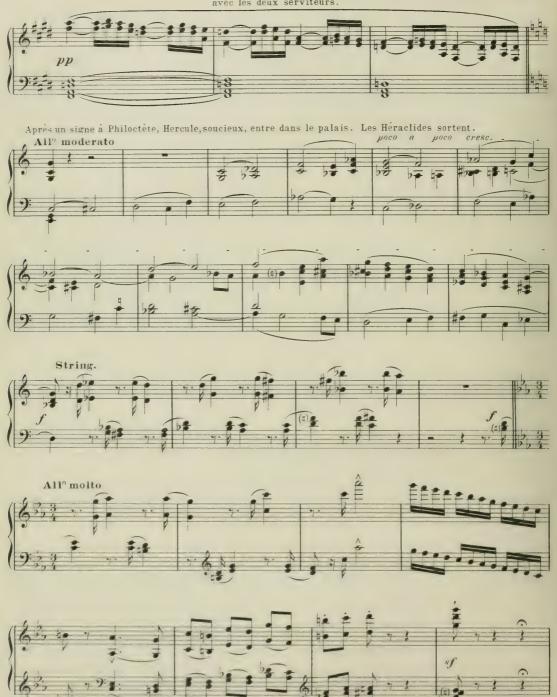

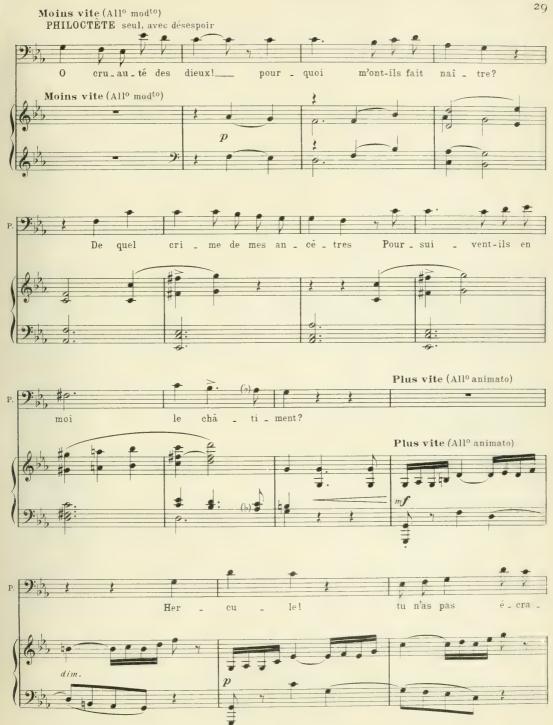

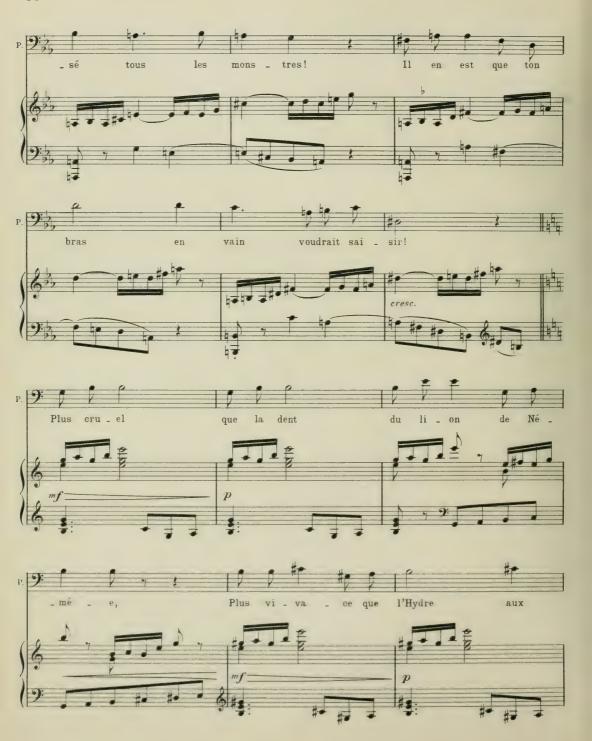

Elle s'éloigne, les bras au ciel, la démarche chancelante, et disparaît avec les deux serviteurs.

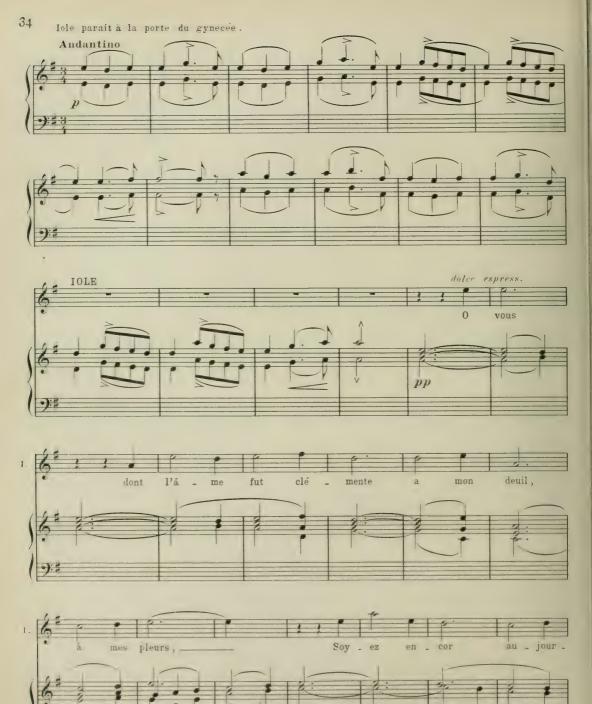

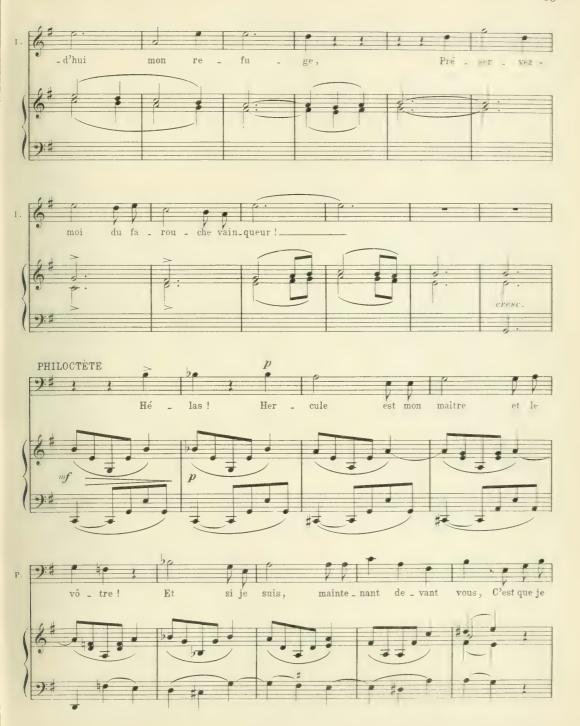

pp

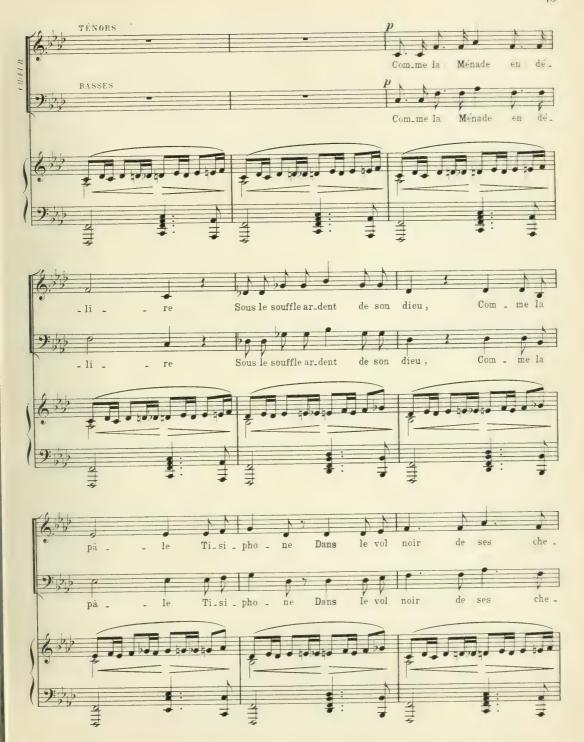

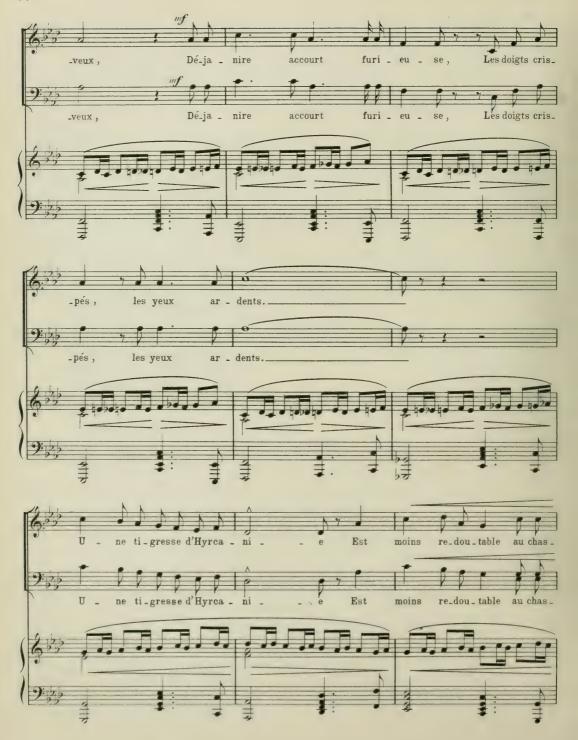

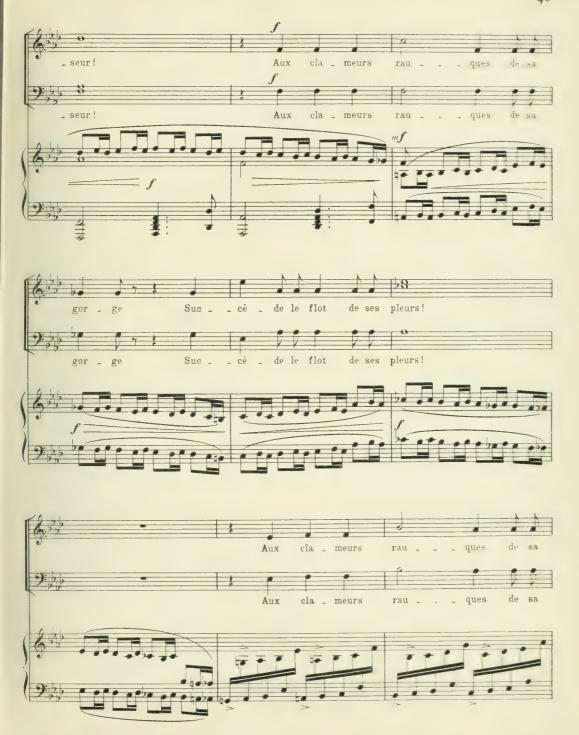

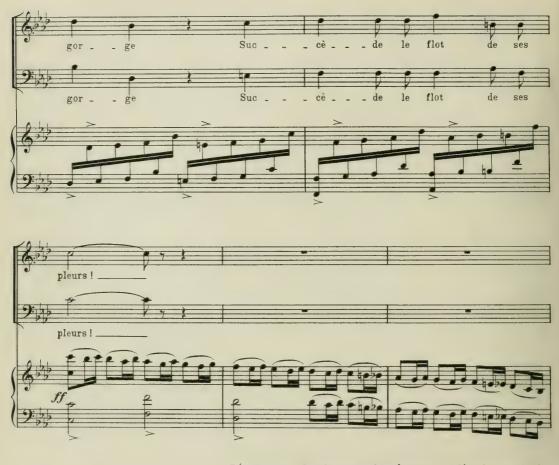

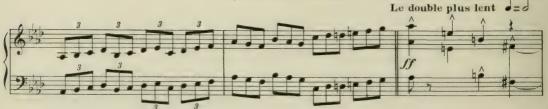

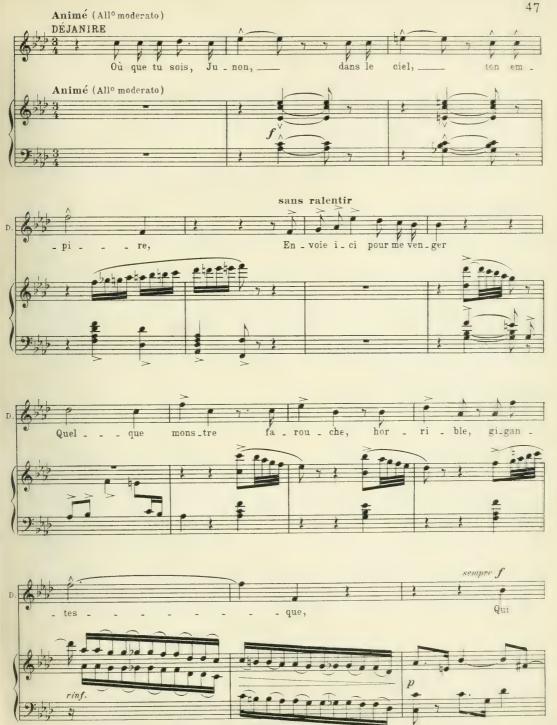

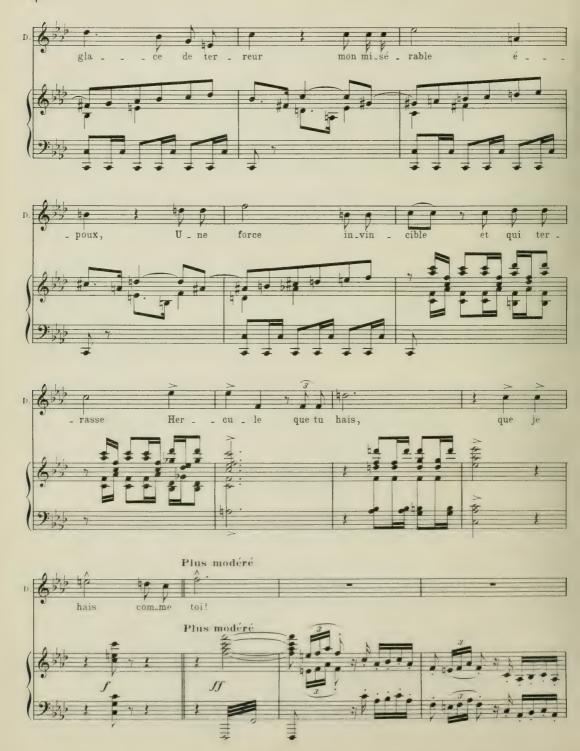

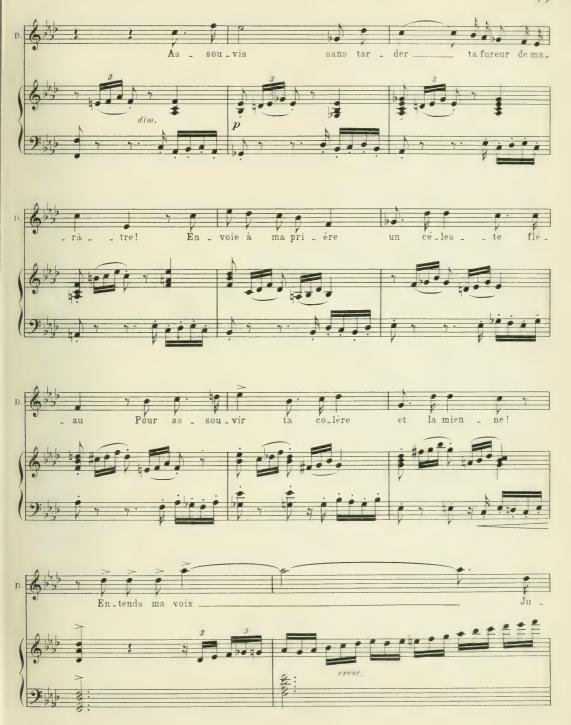

Phénice et d'une troupe de femmes Etoliennes et de serviteurs portant des coffrets.

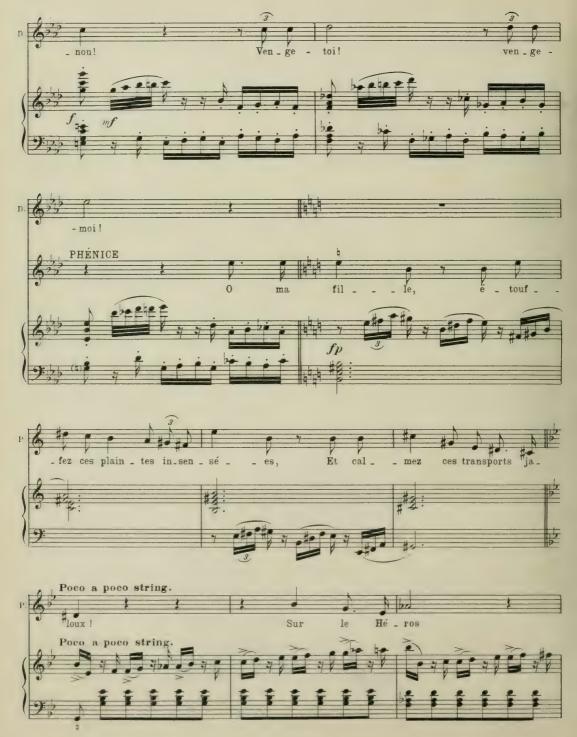

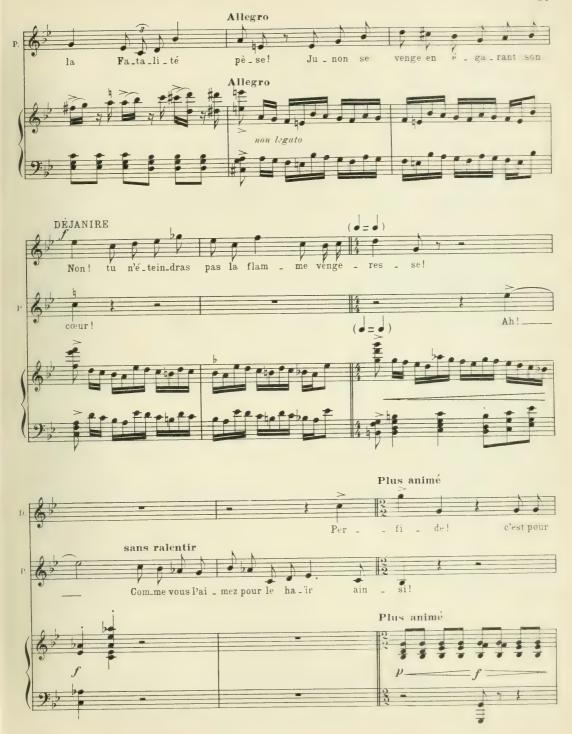

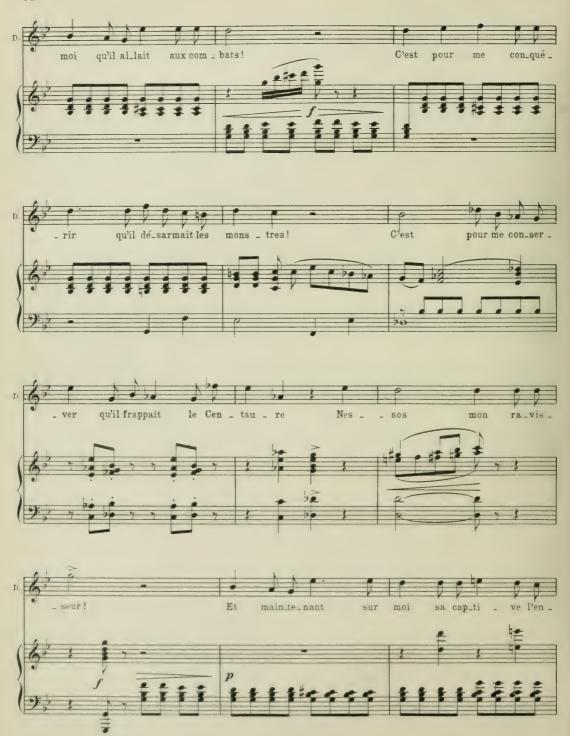

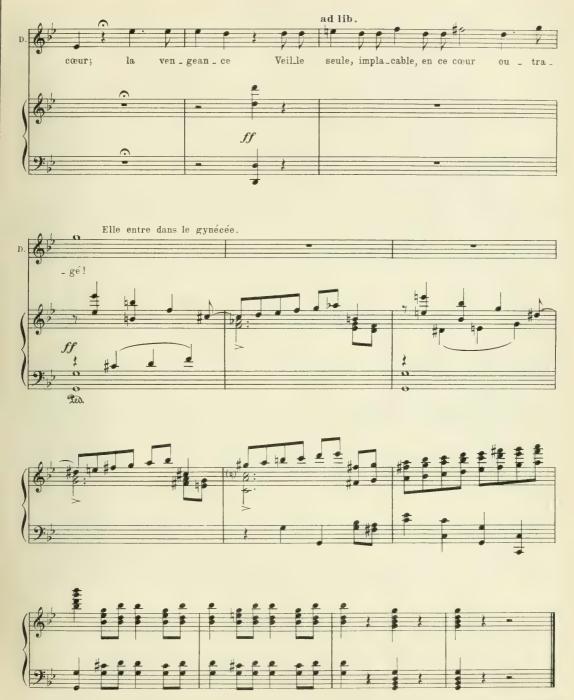

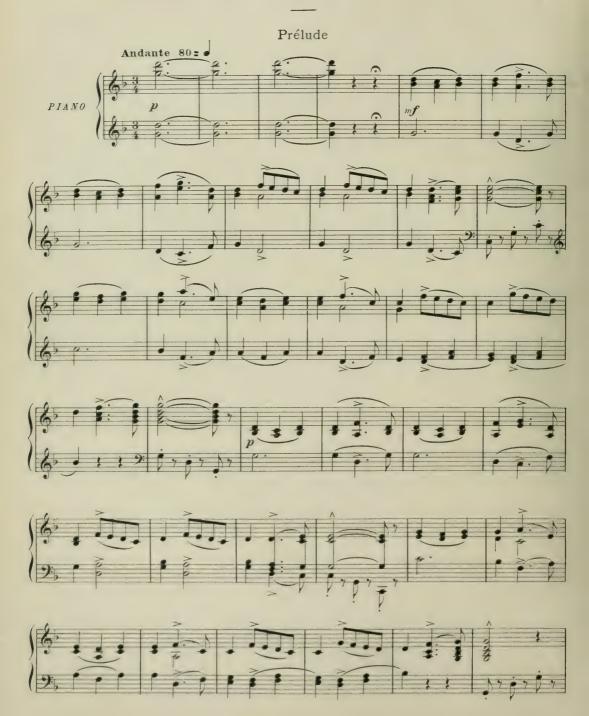

Fin du 1er Acte

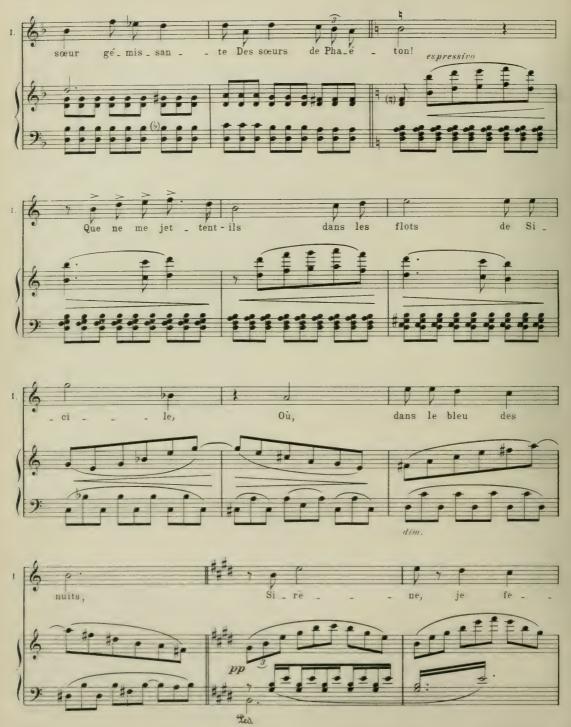

Le gynécée. Une salle donnant sur des jardins. Iole, avec ses femmes.

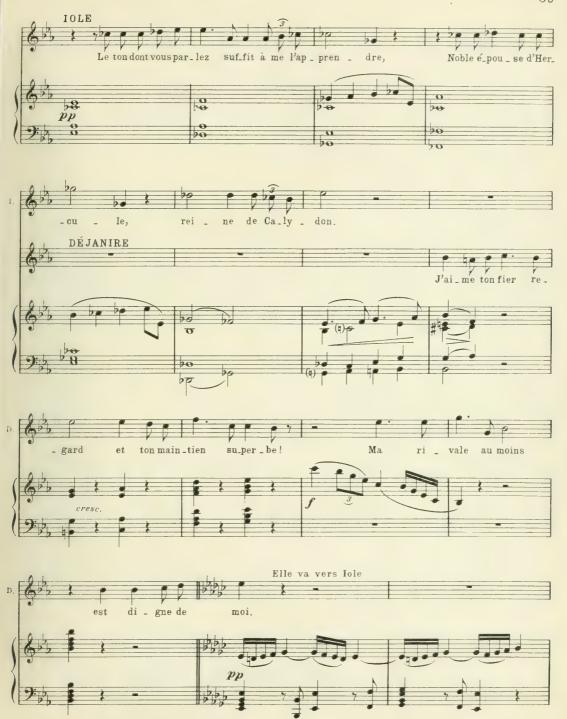

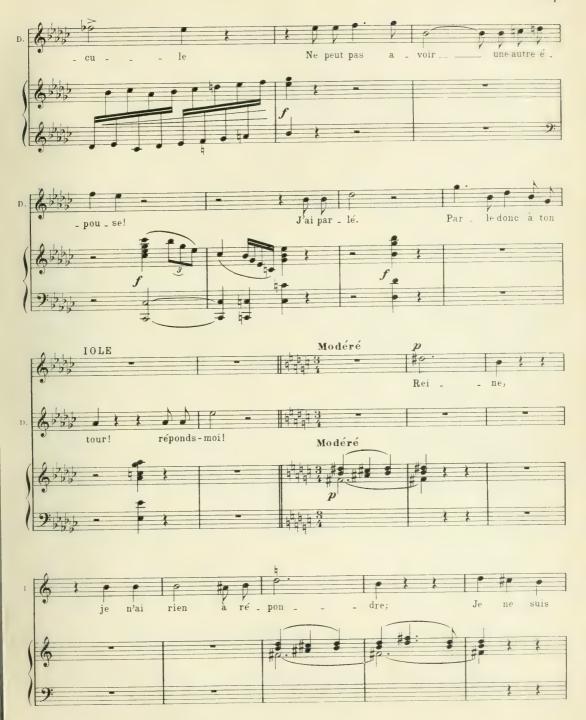

Déjanire paraît en avant de sa suite, qui reste au fond. Elle s'arrête un instant sur le seuil avant d'entrer, fixant sur Iole des regards terribles.

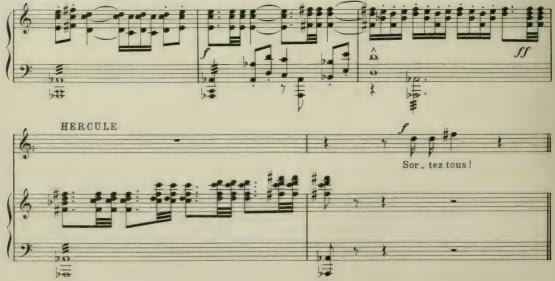

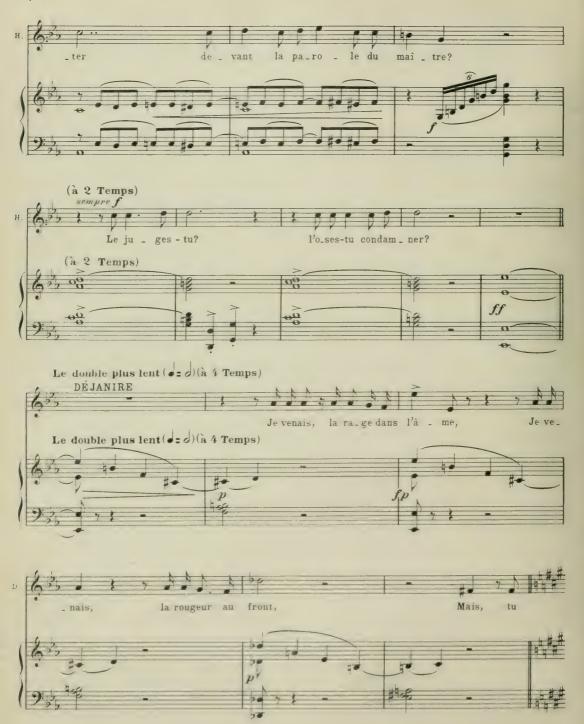

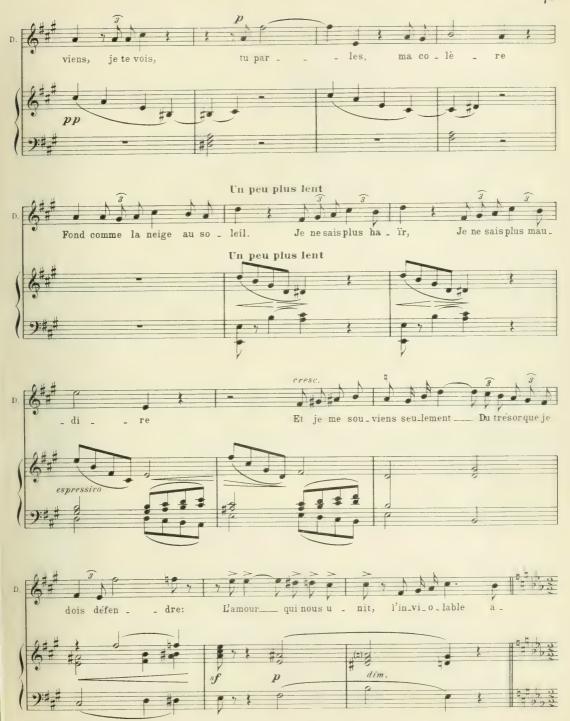

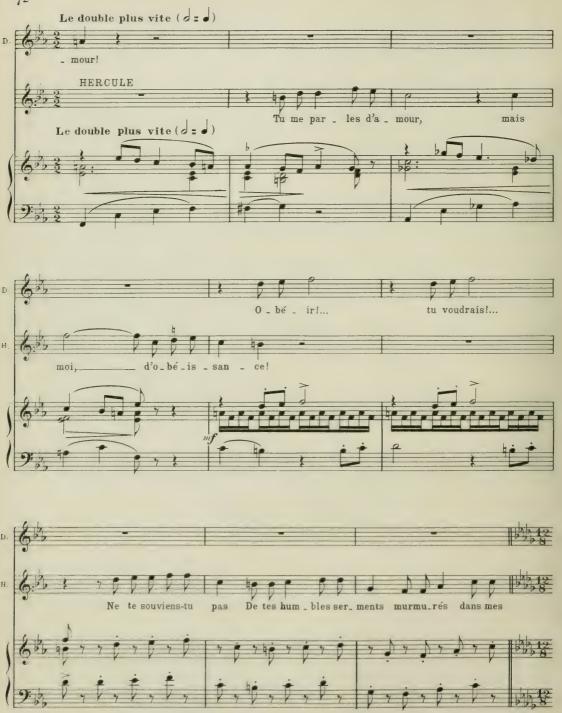

Hercule paraît. Son visage est terrible. Entrée silencieuse et superbement lente. Il marche vers Déjanire qui soudainement glacée de crainte et de respect recule devant lui, comme fascinée par son regard.

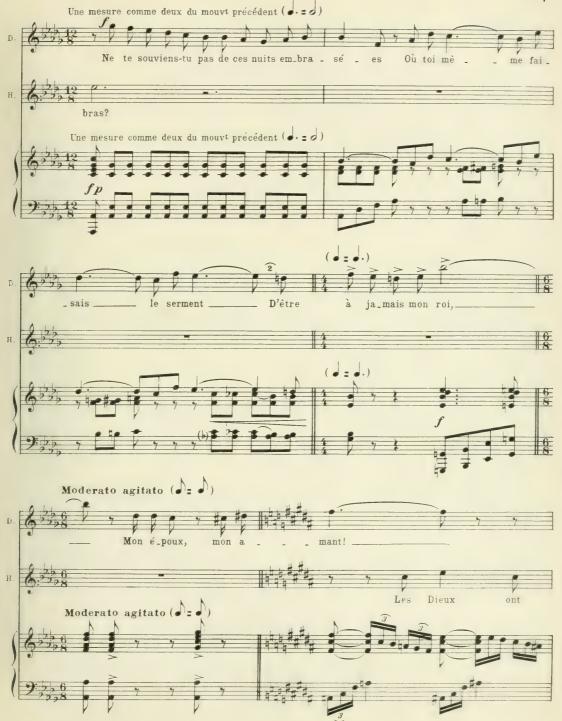

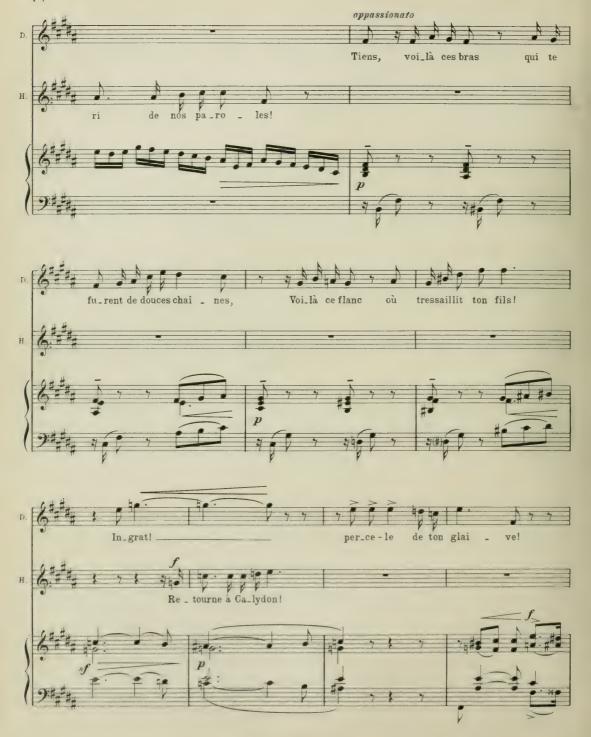

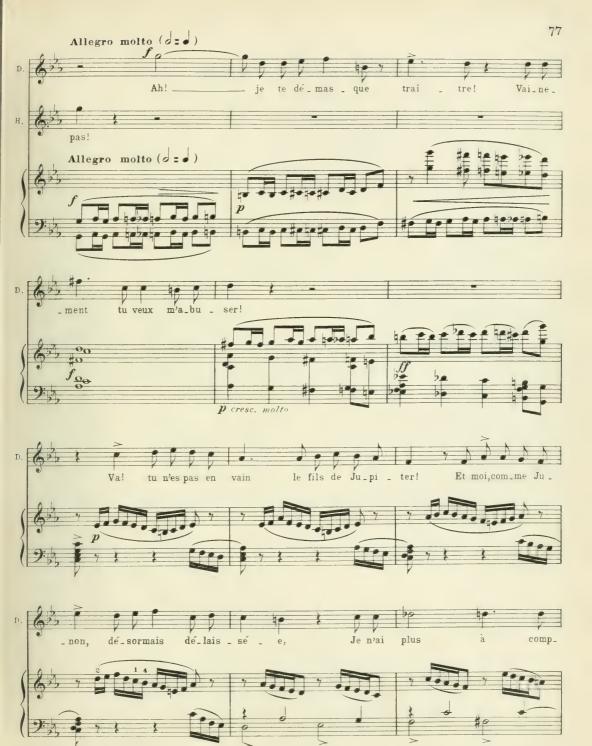

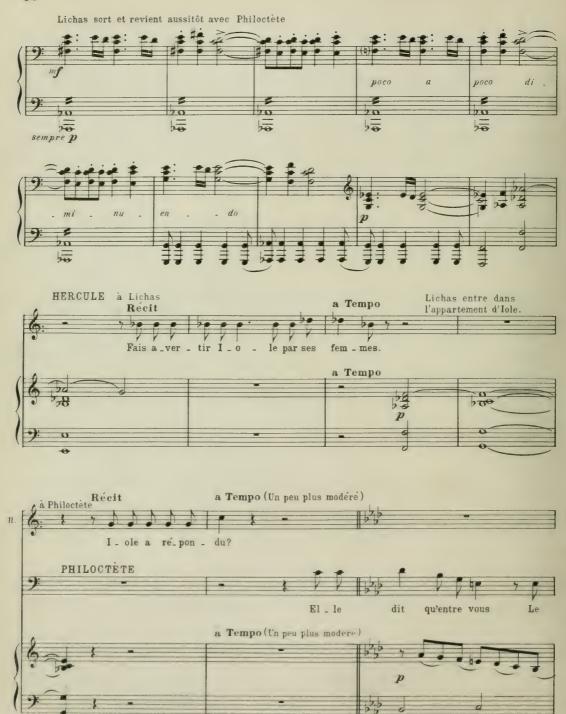

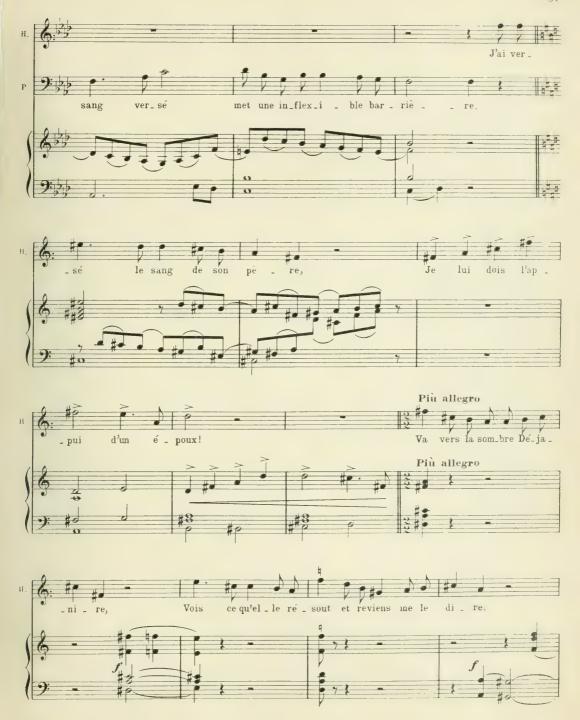

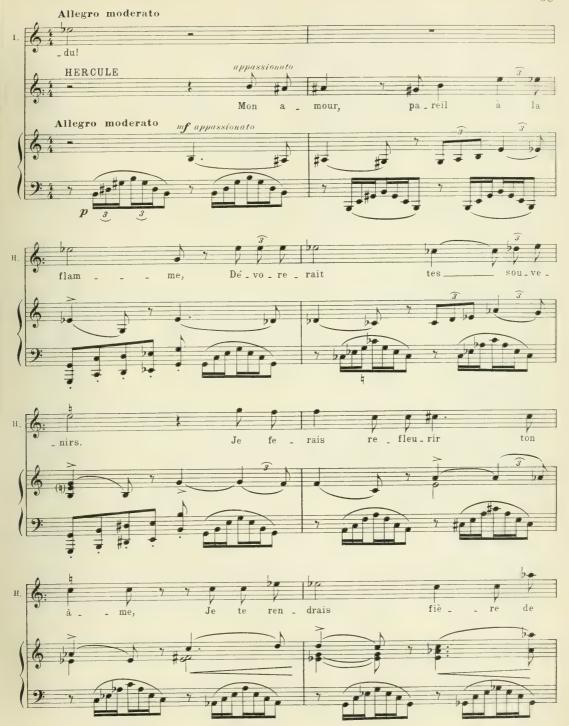

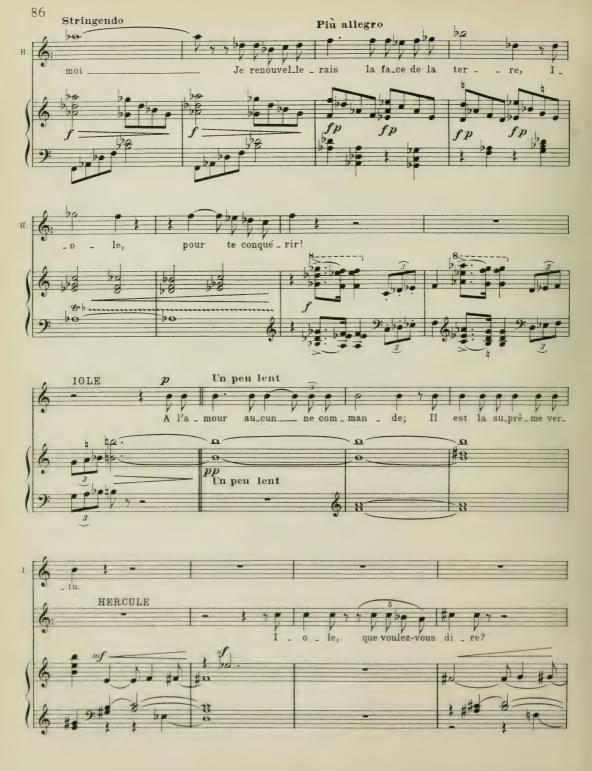

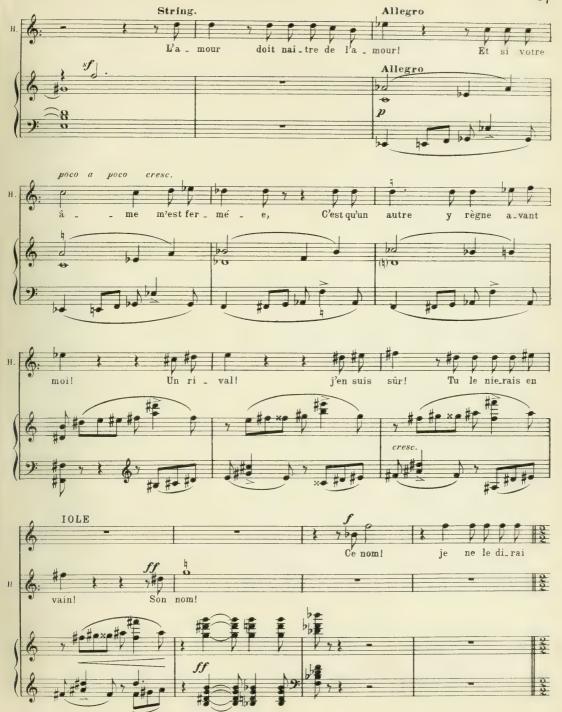

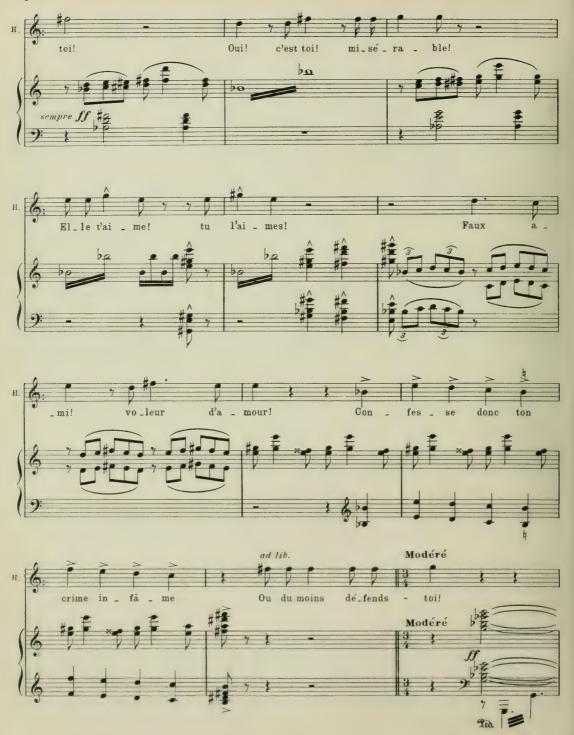

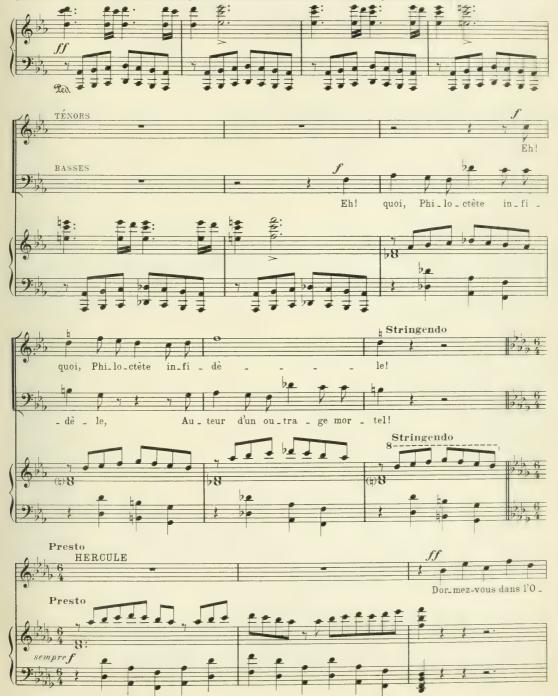

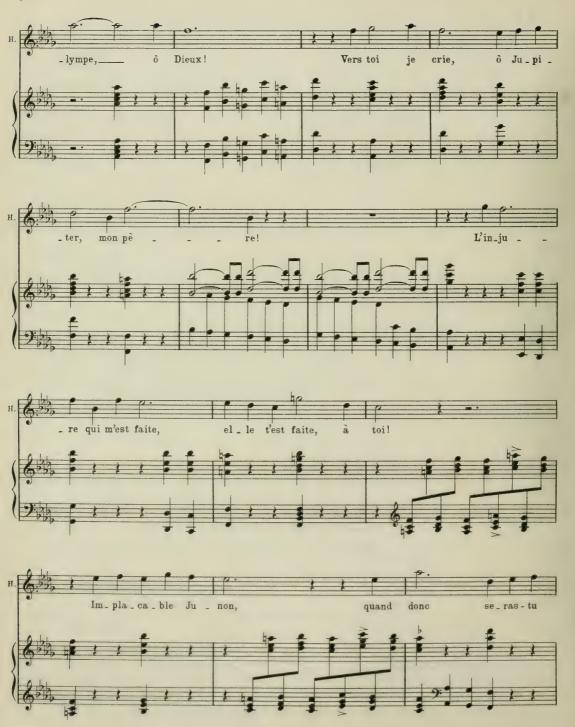

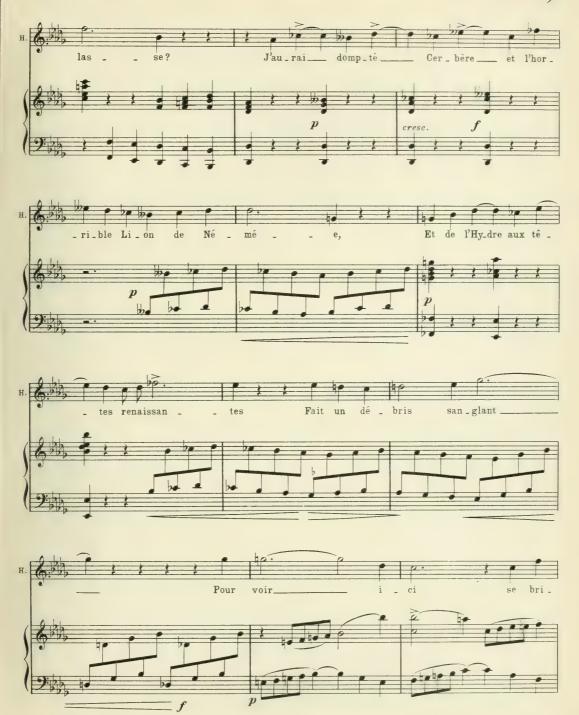

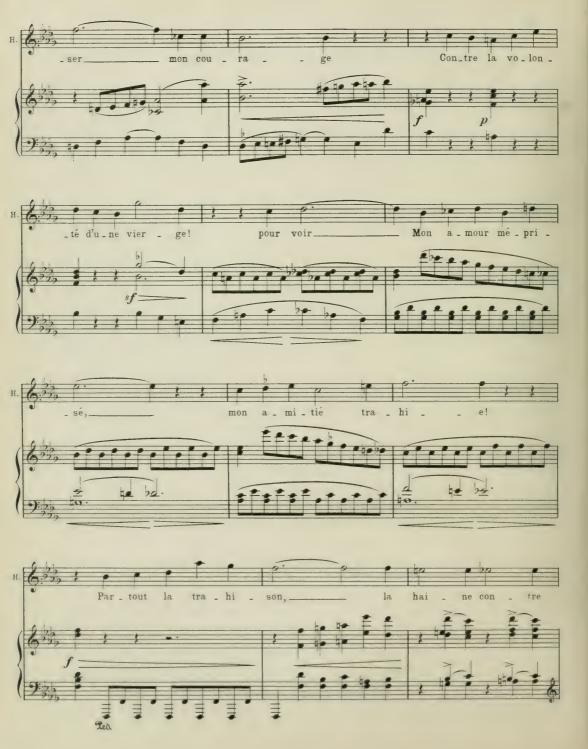

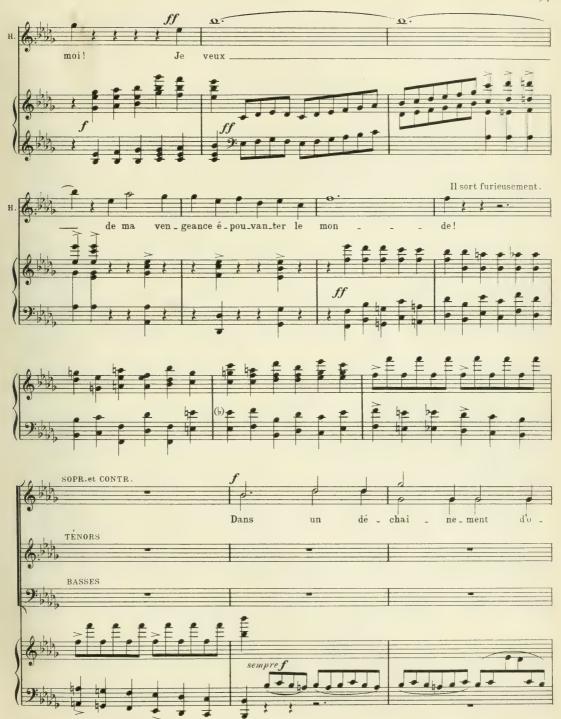

Aux cris d'Hercule, le chœur paraît: les Œchaliennes, compagnes d'Iole, les Héraclides. Philoctète sort, emmené par Lichas. Iole, défaillante, demeure parmi les Œchaliennes. Hercule, furieux, parcourt la scène.

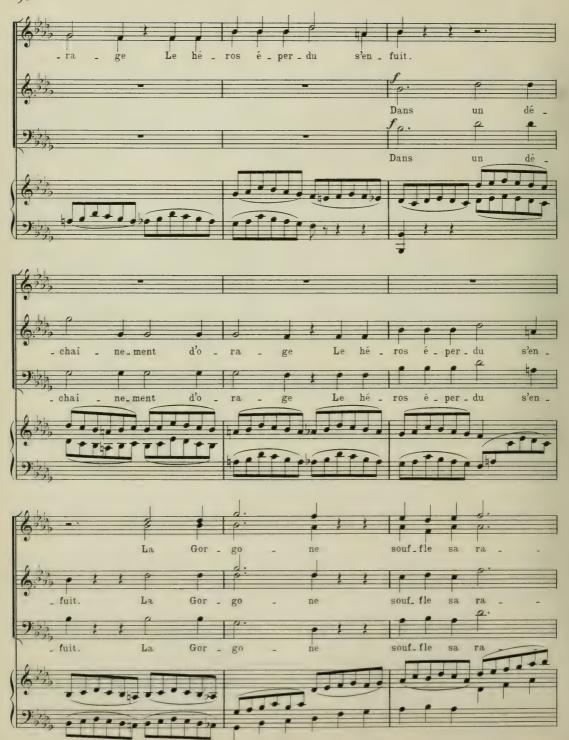

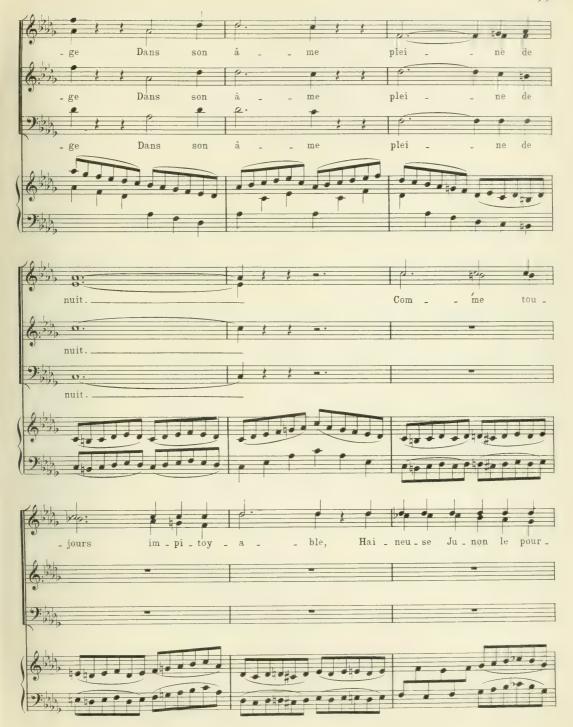

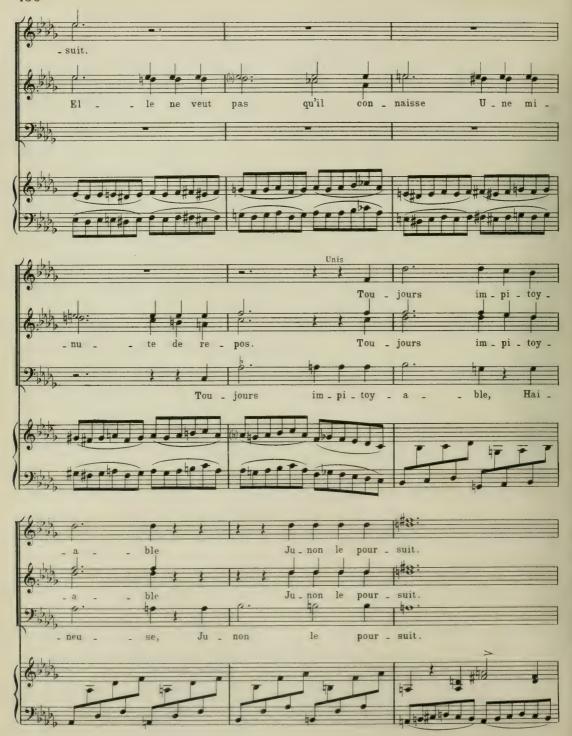

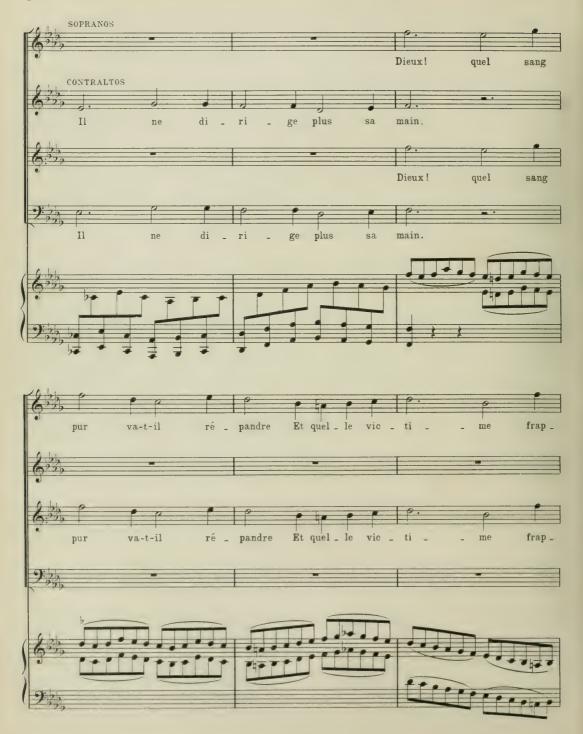

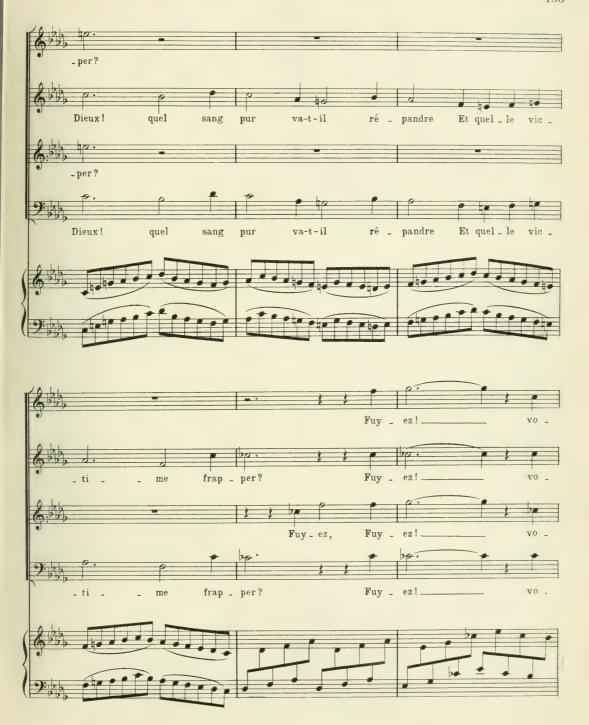

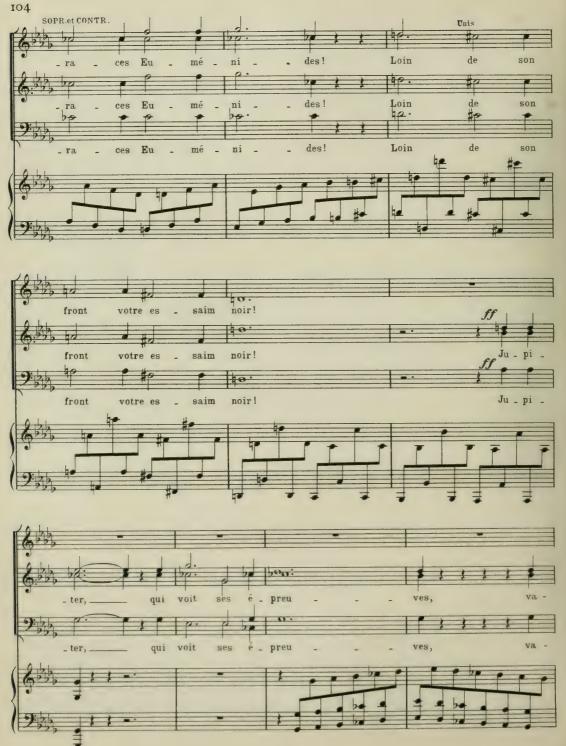

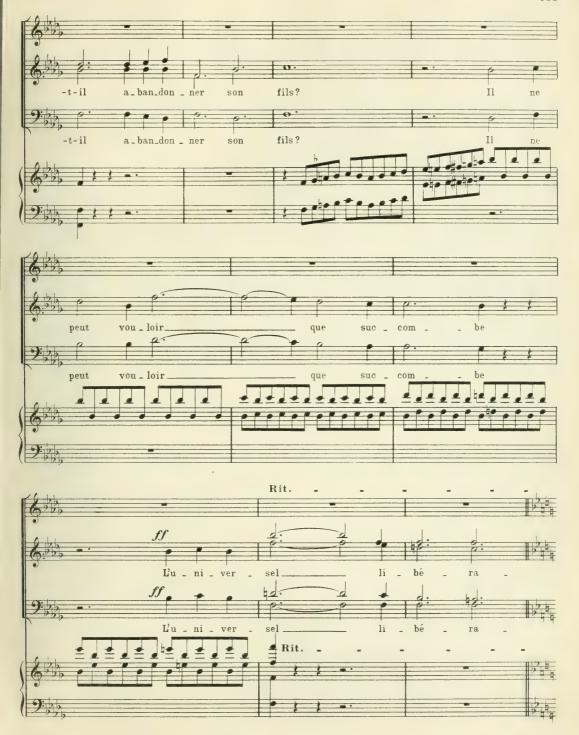

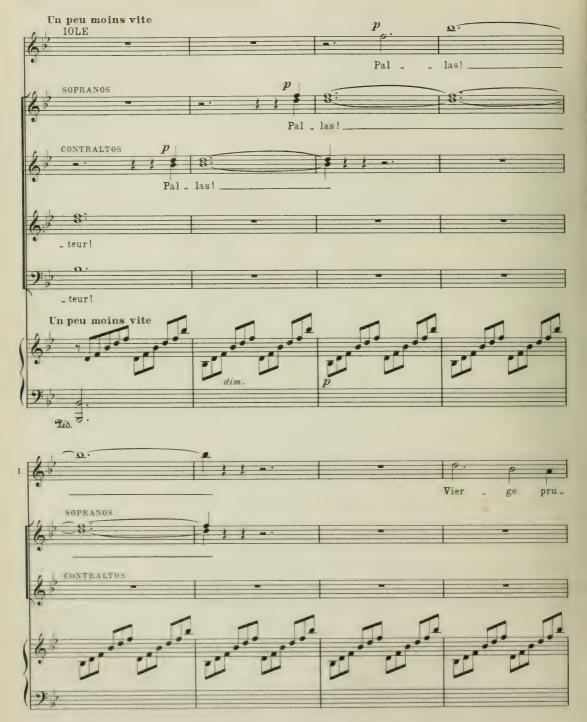

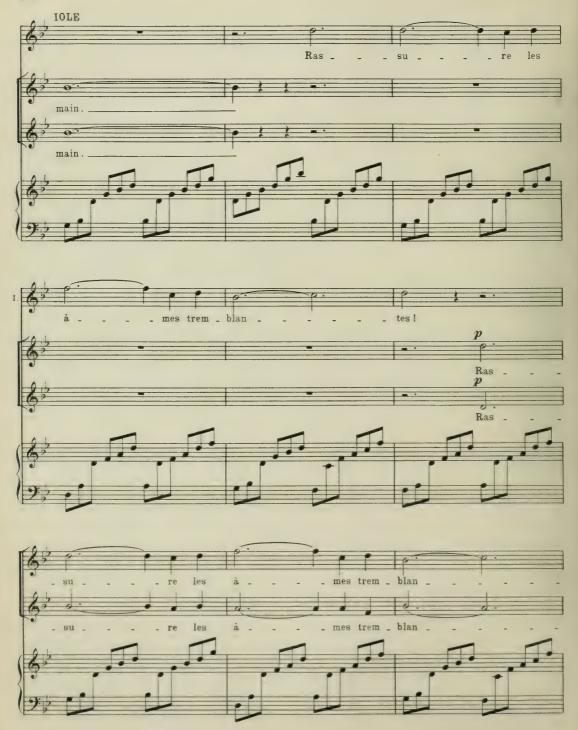

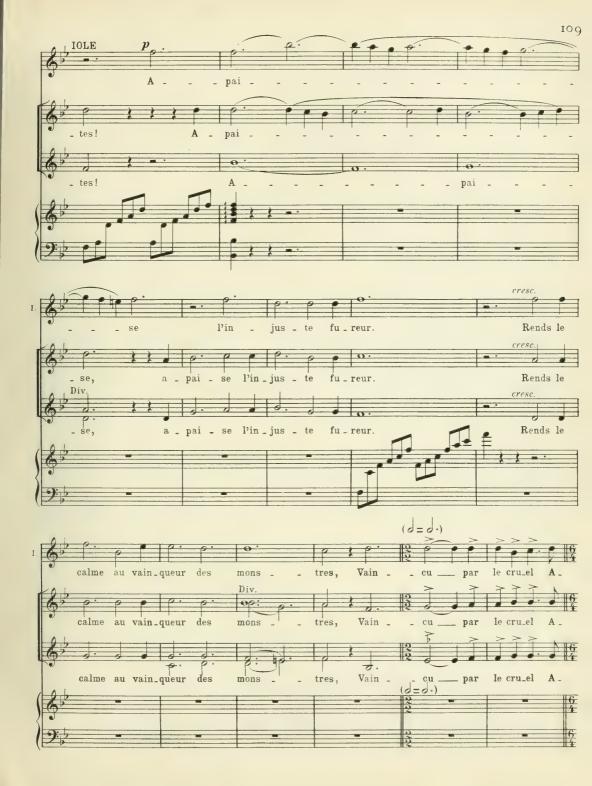

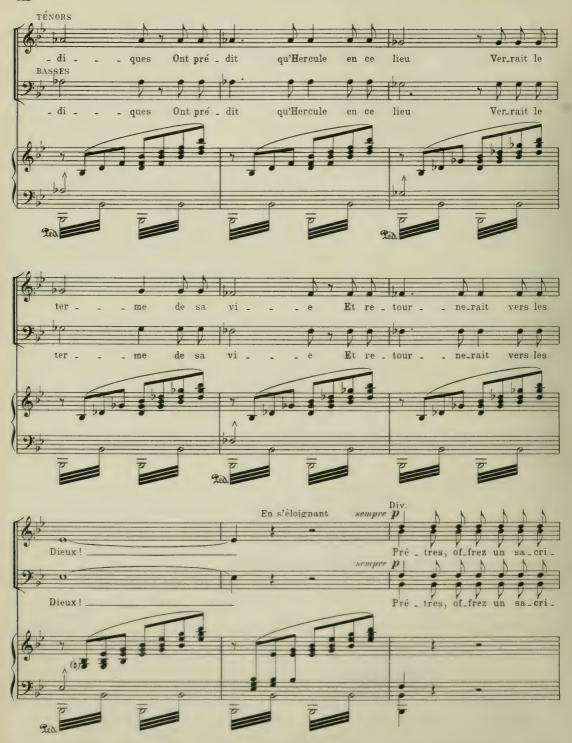

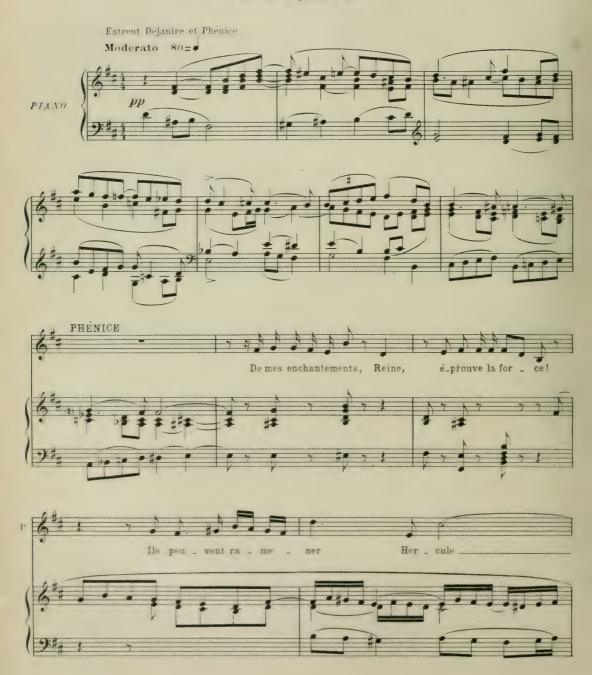

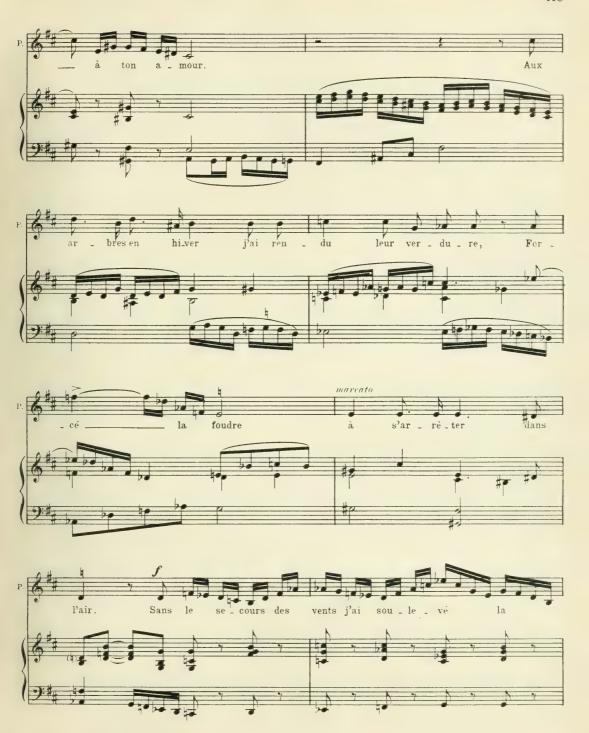

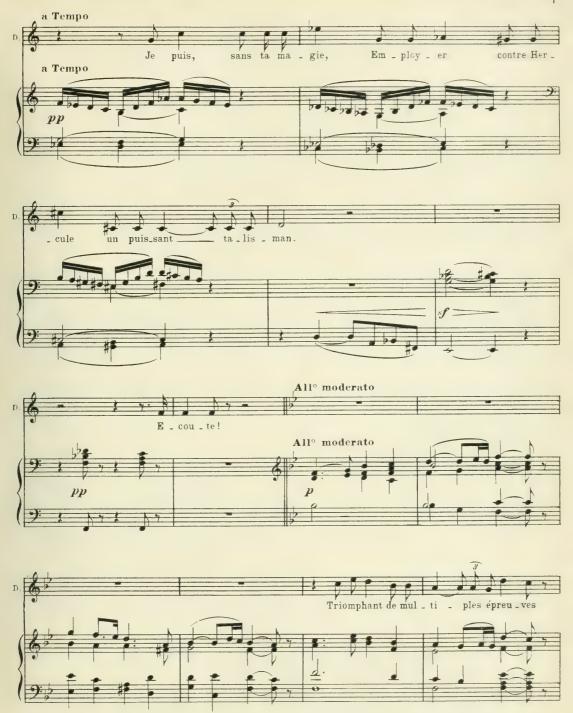

Acte III

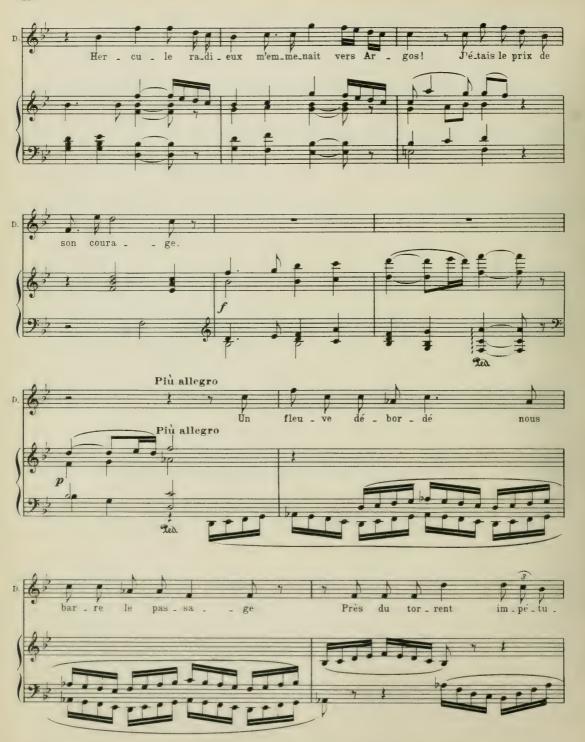

Mome decor qu'au 2º Acte.

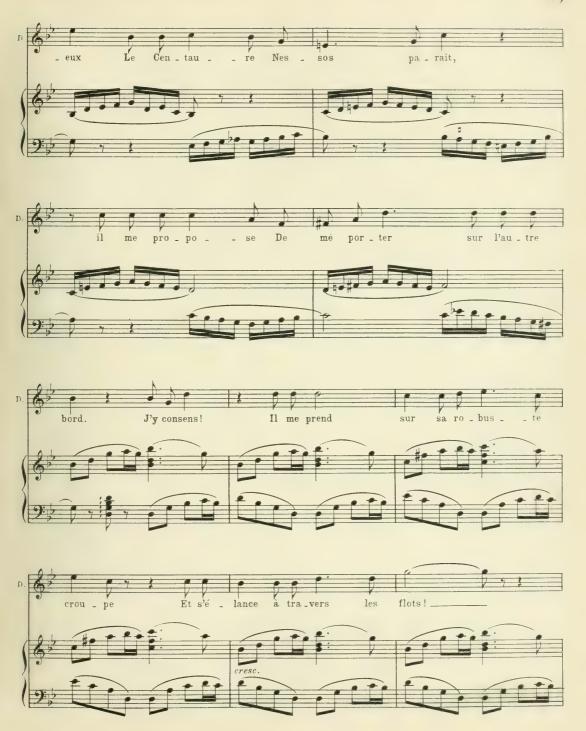

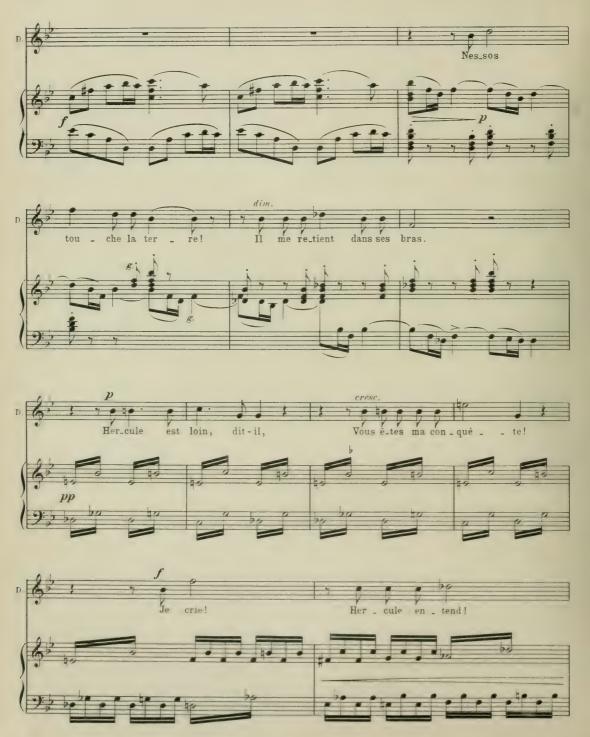

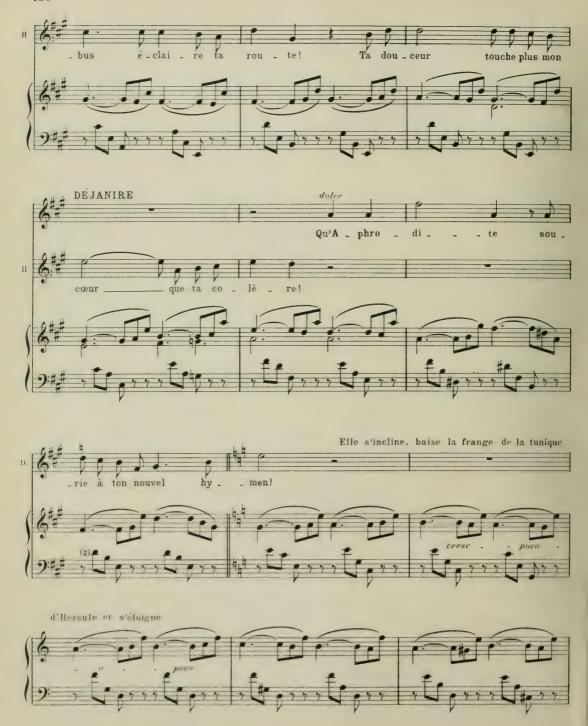

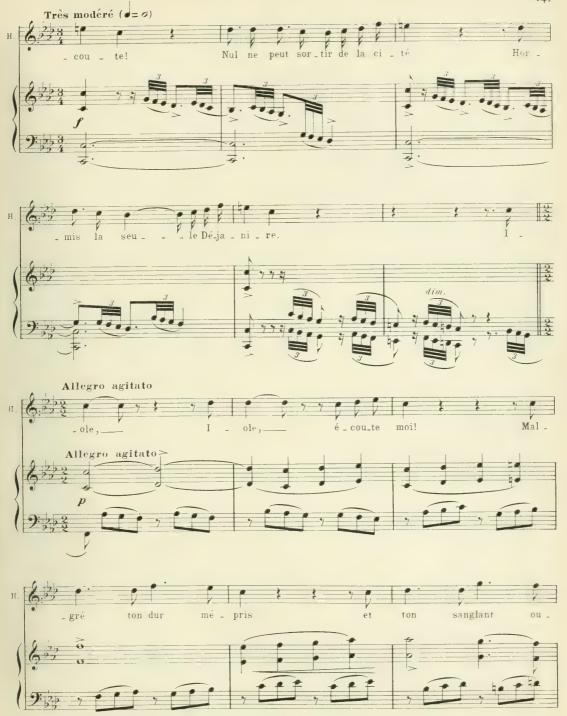

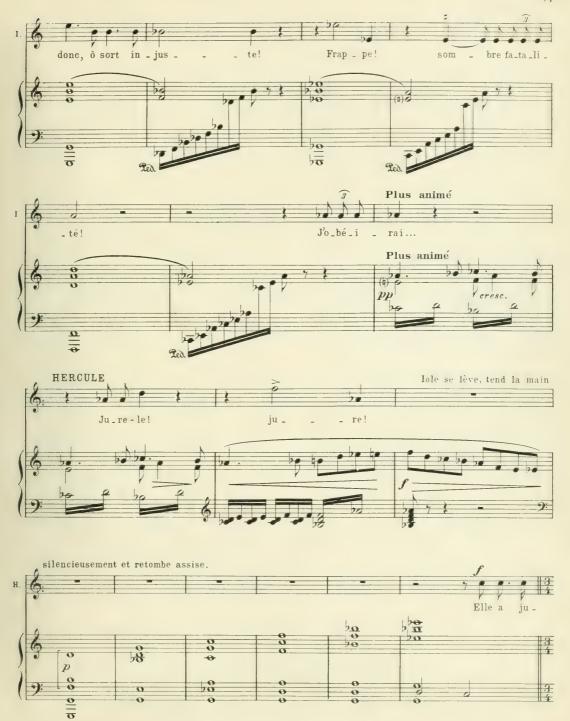

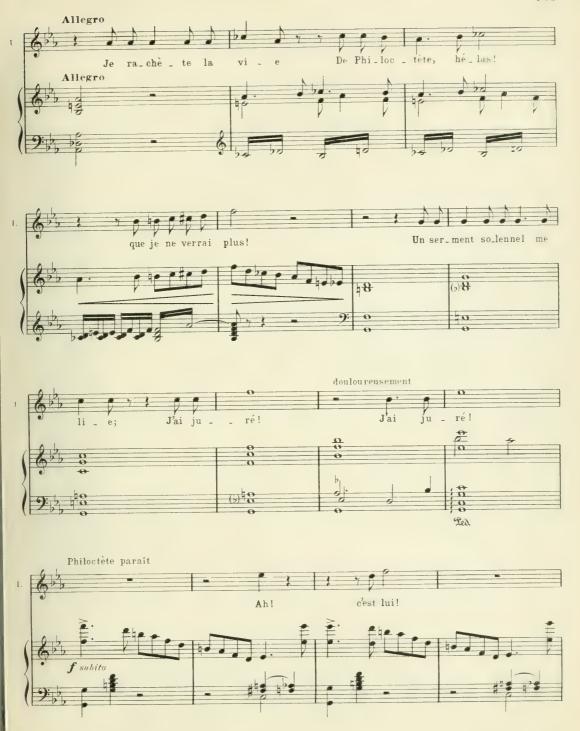

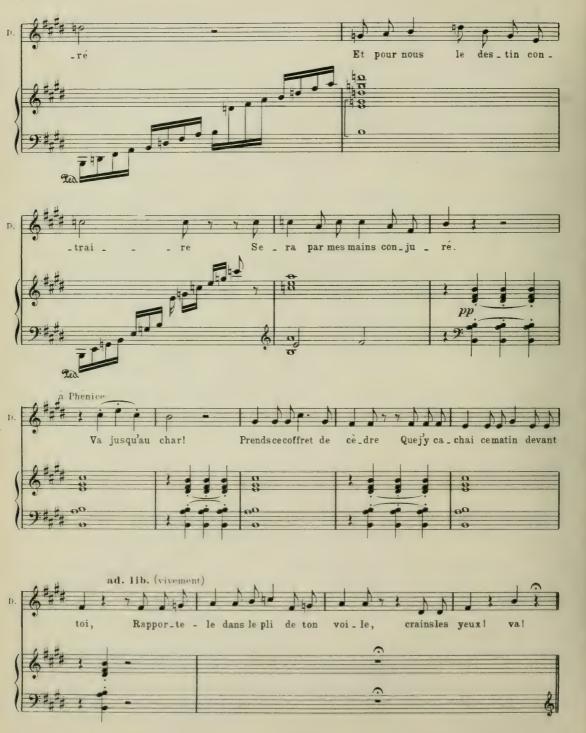

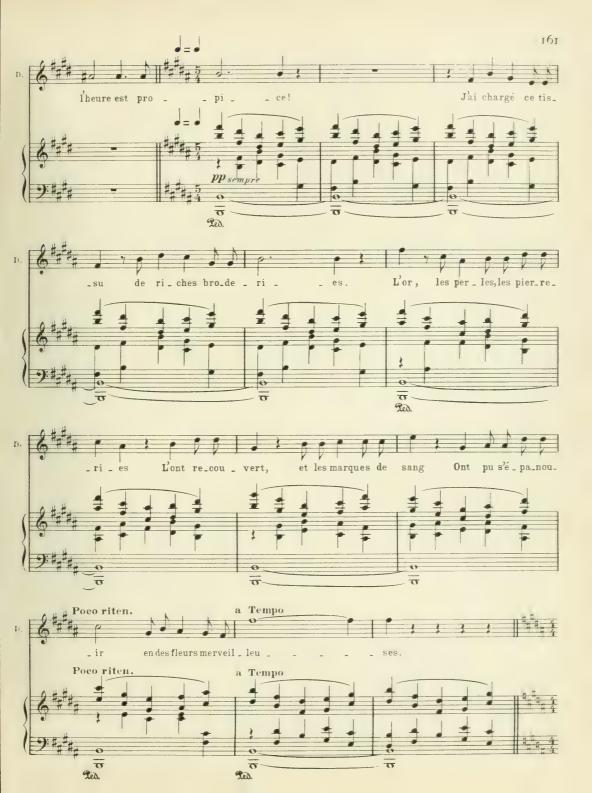

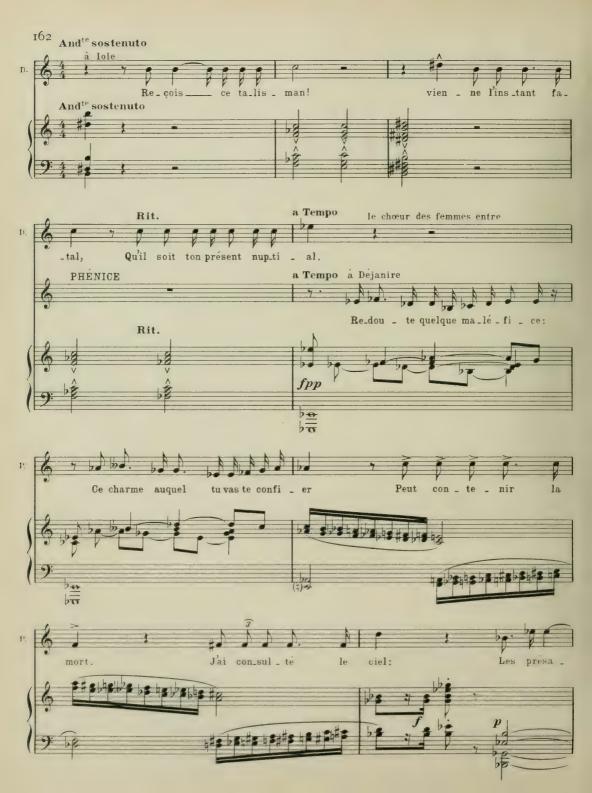

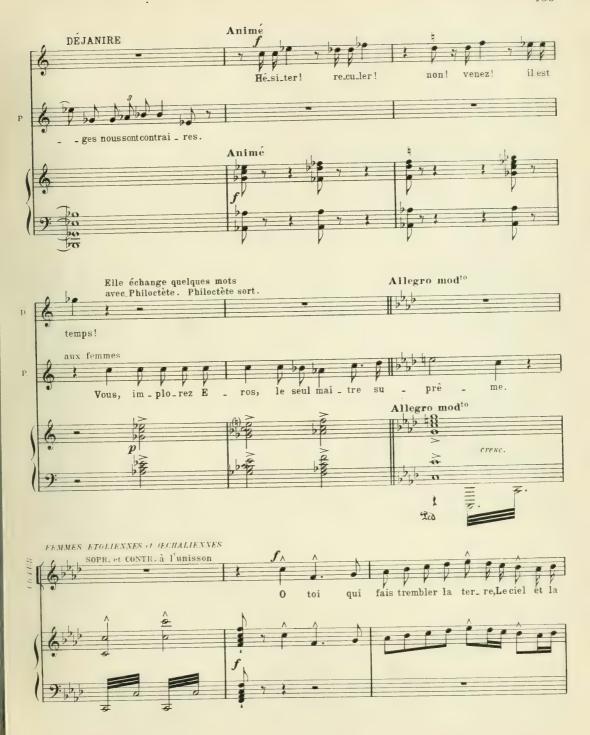

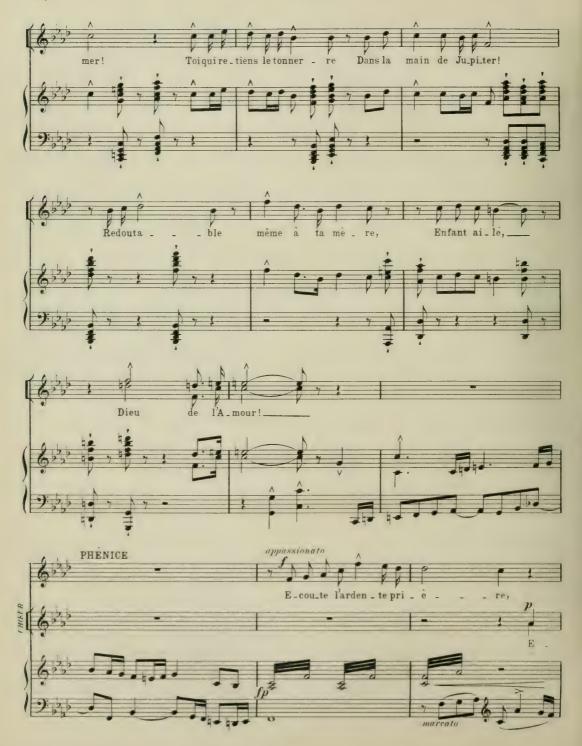

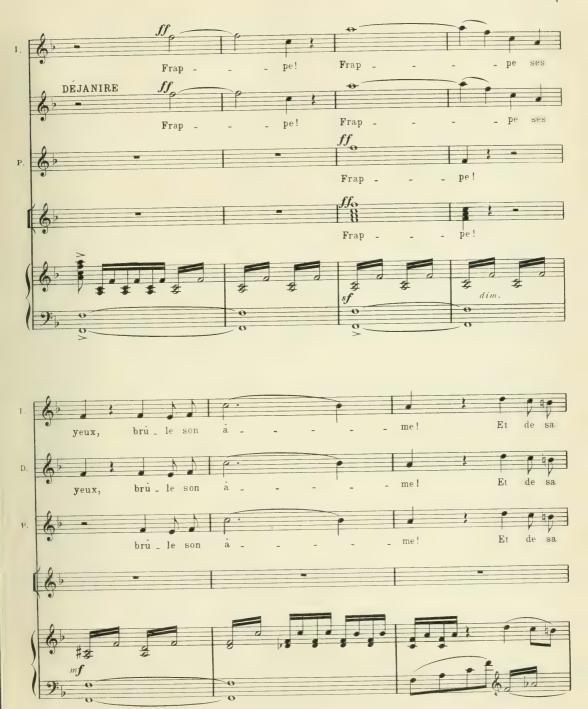

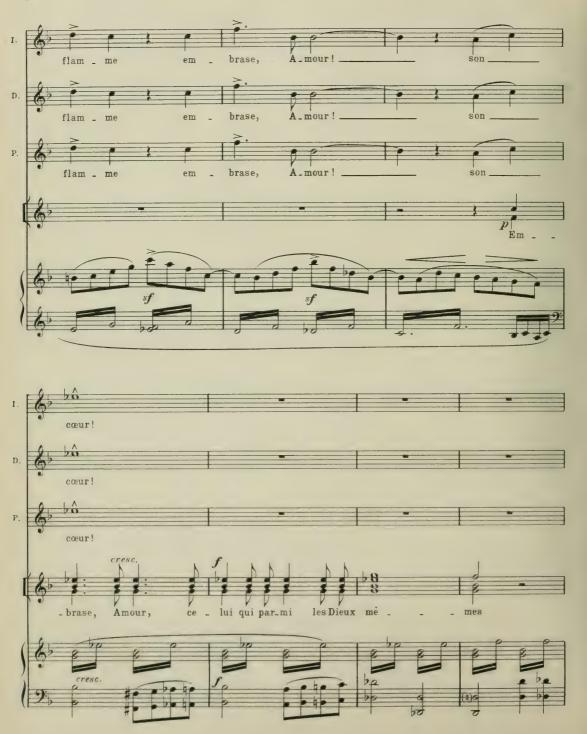

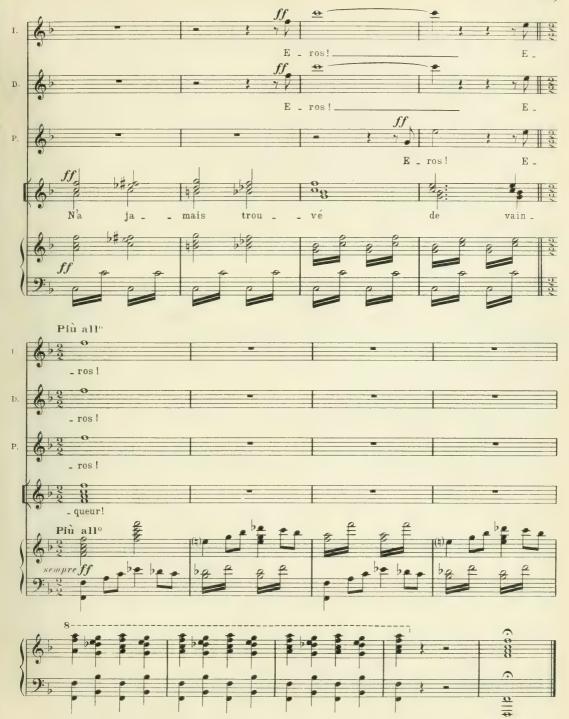

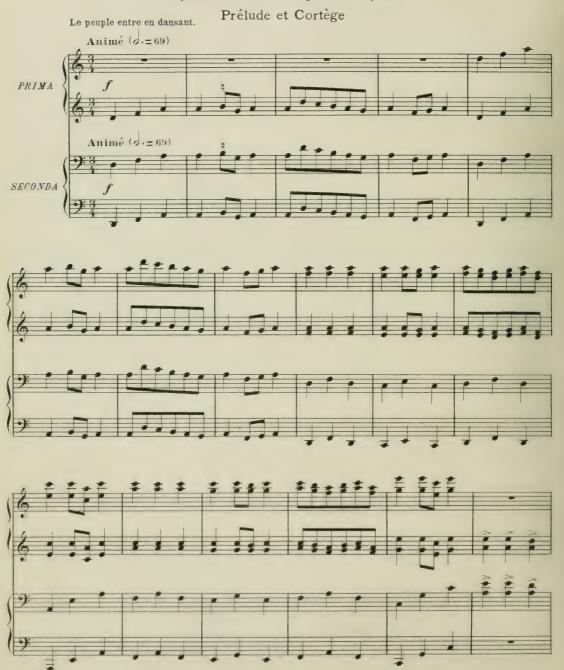

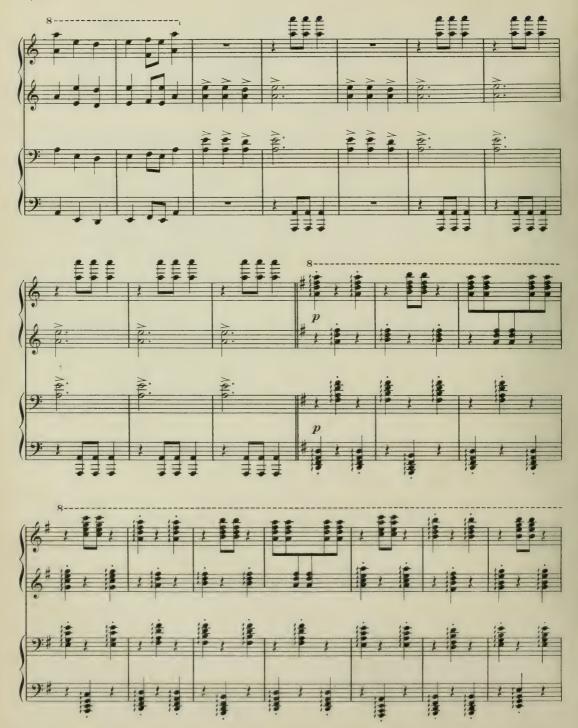

Fin du 3º Acte

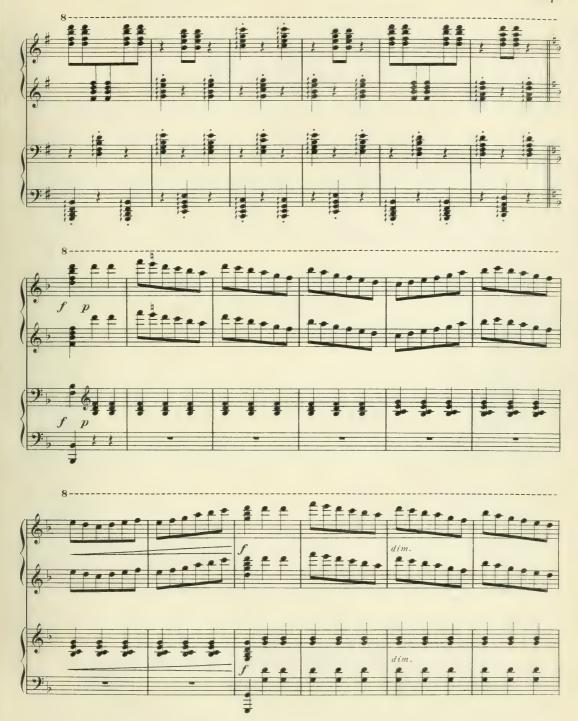

Acte IV

Une place devant le temple de Jupiter. Au fond, un bûcher décoré de palmes et de fleurs.

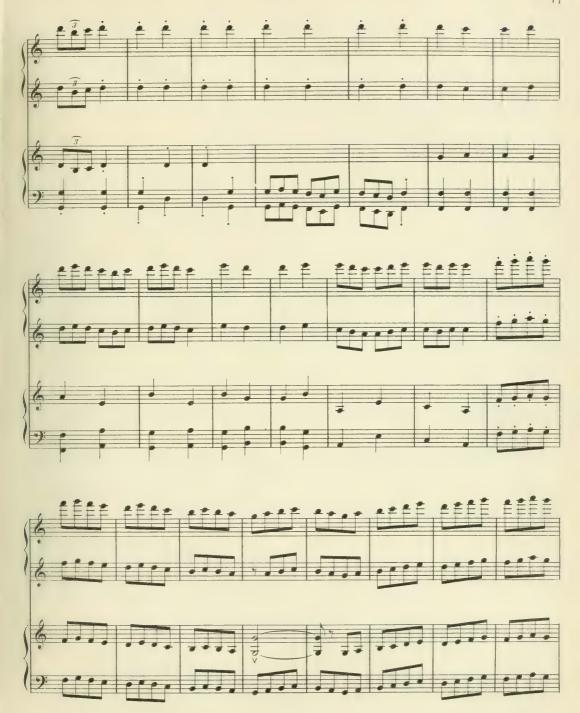

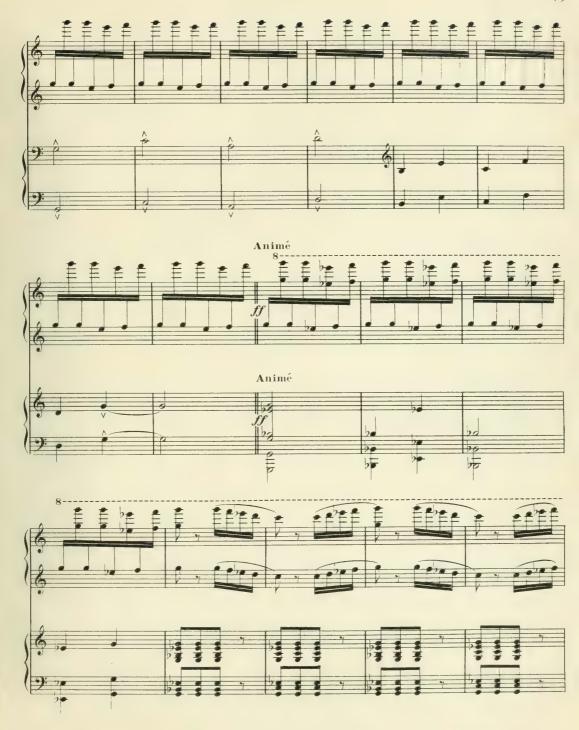

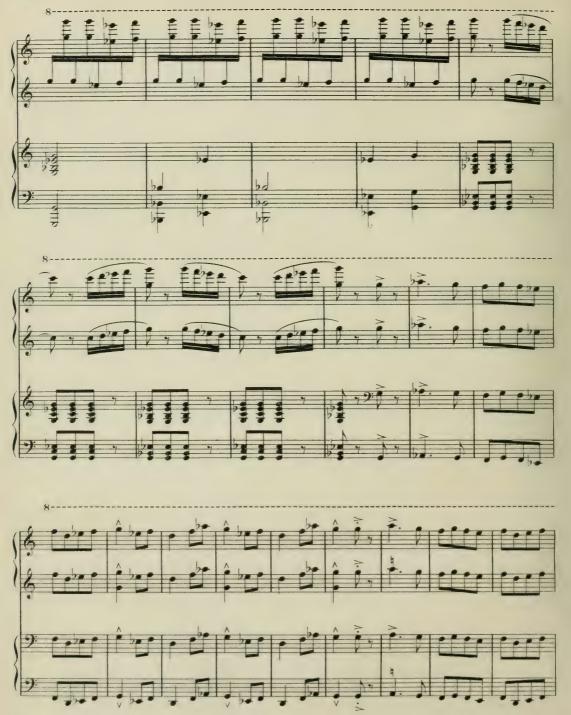

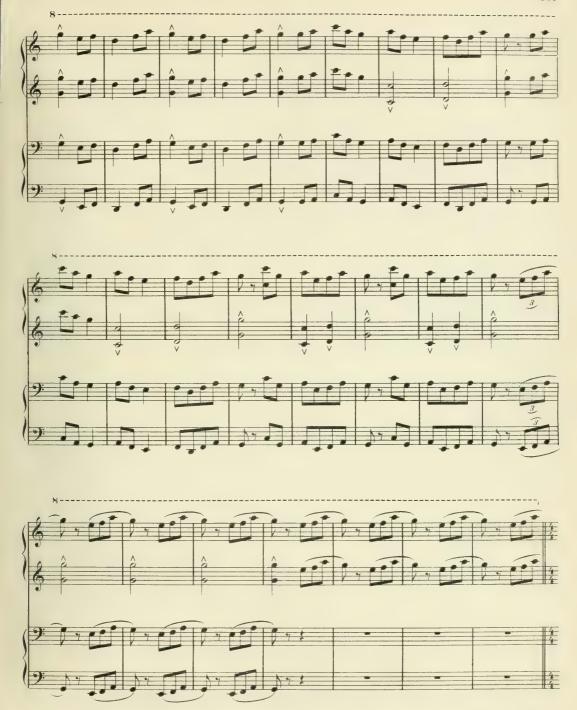

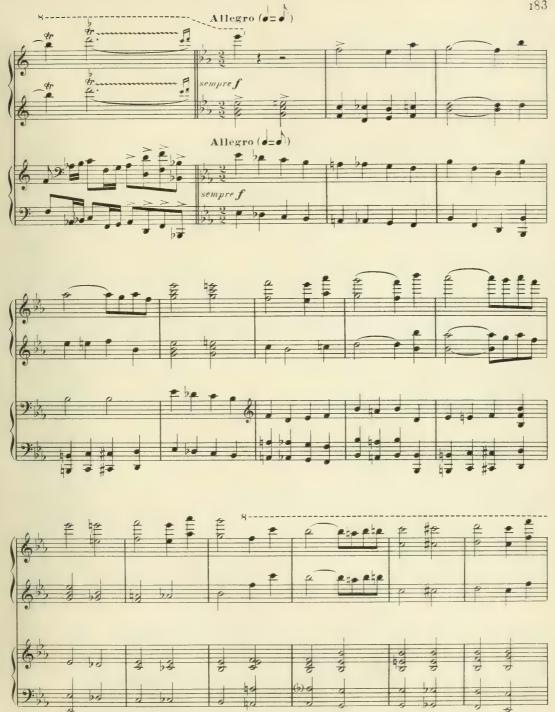

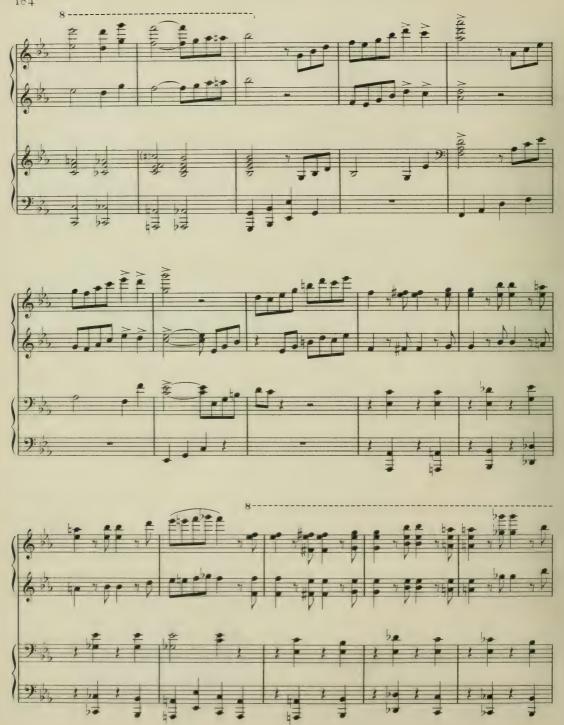

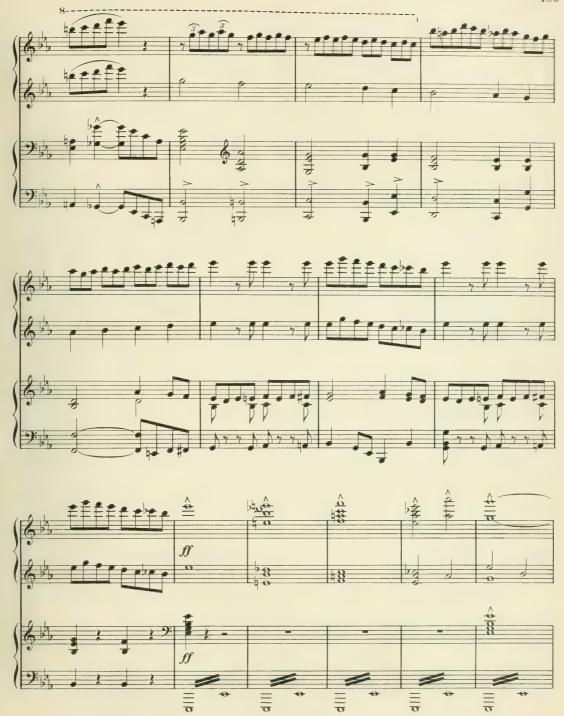

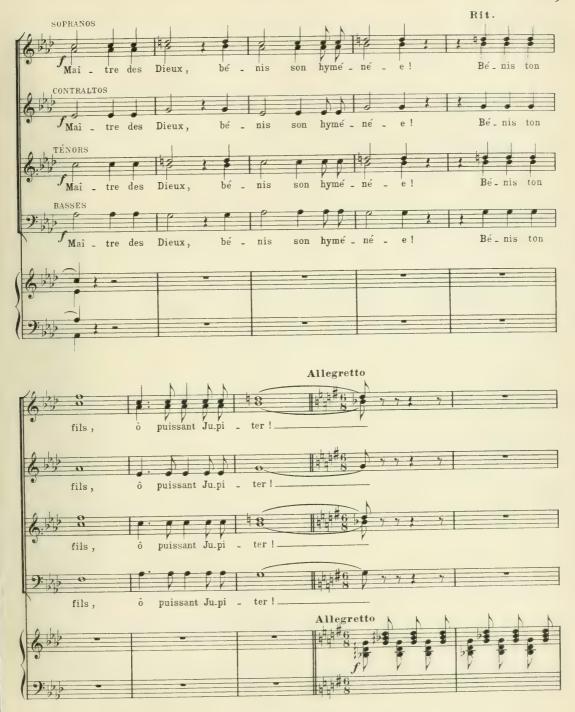

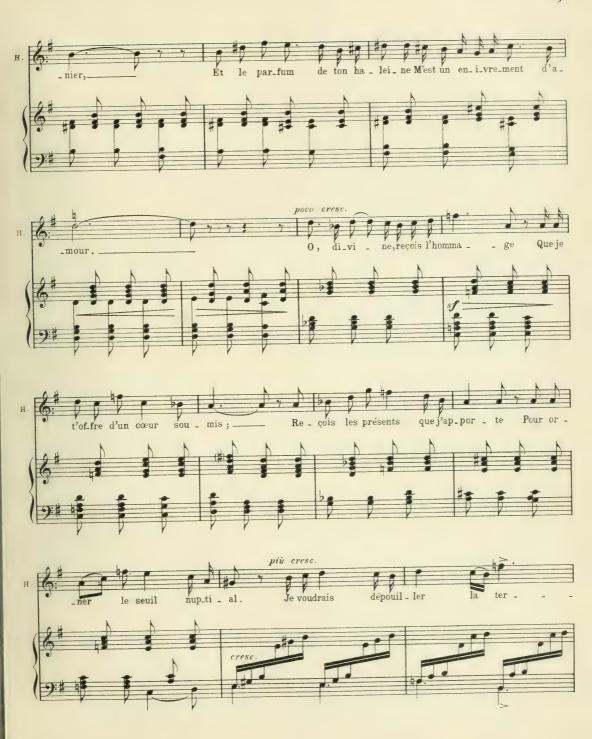

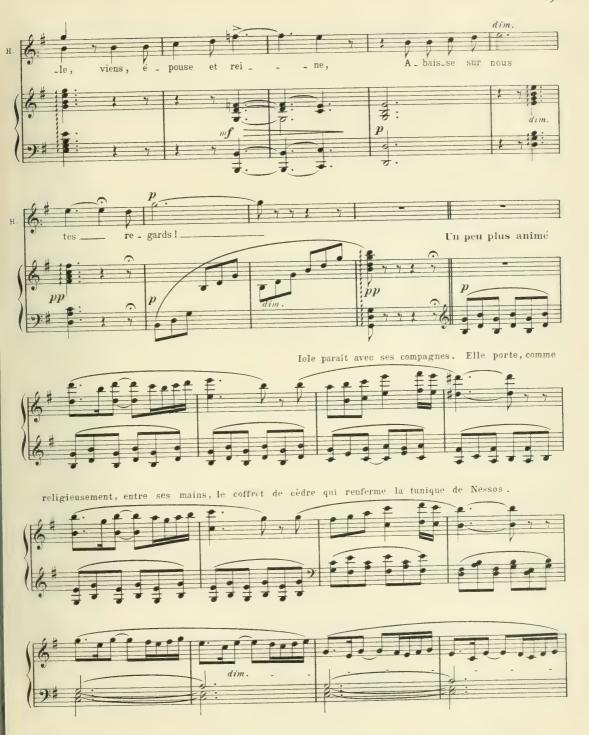

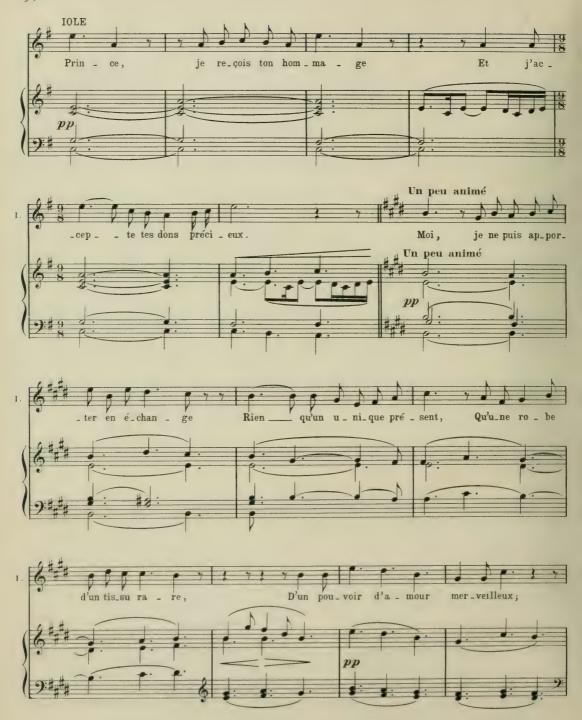

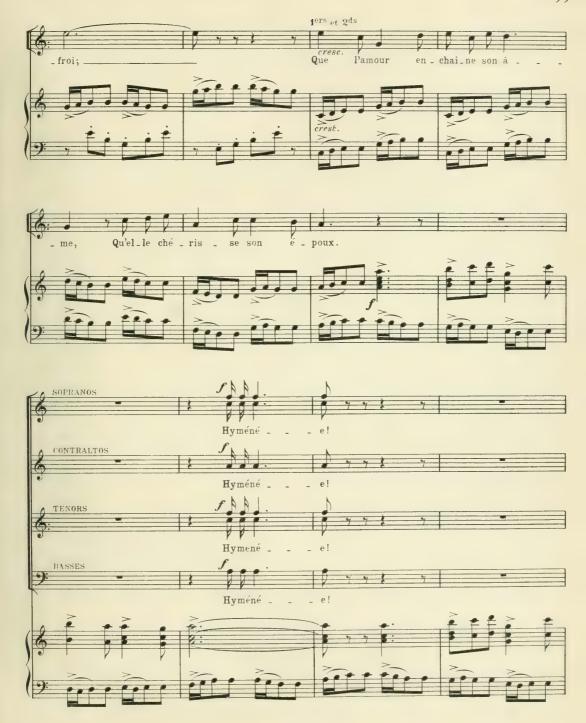

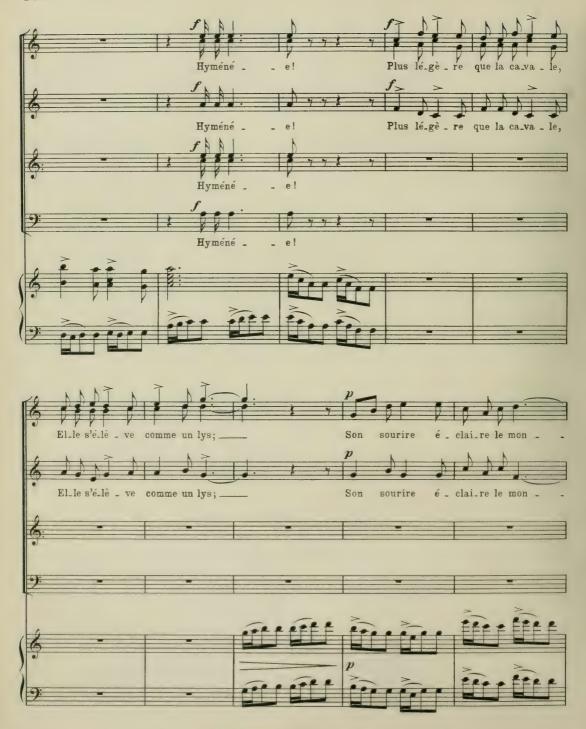

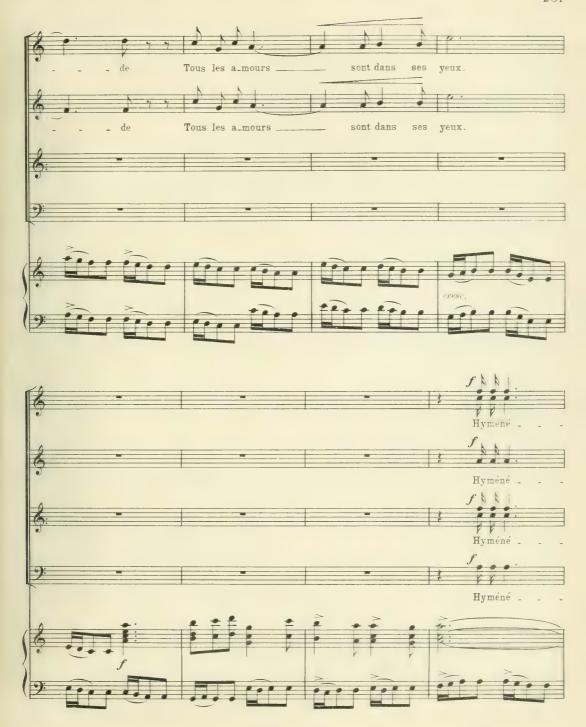

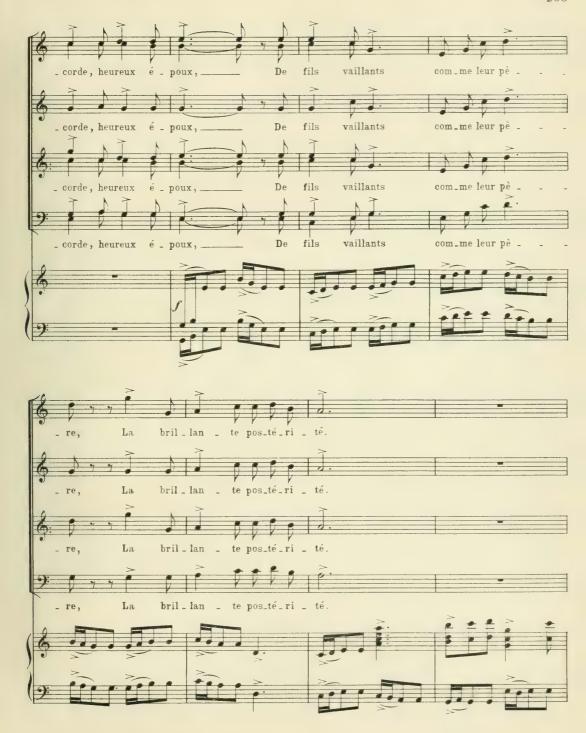

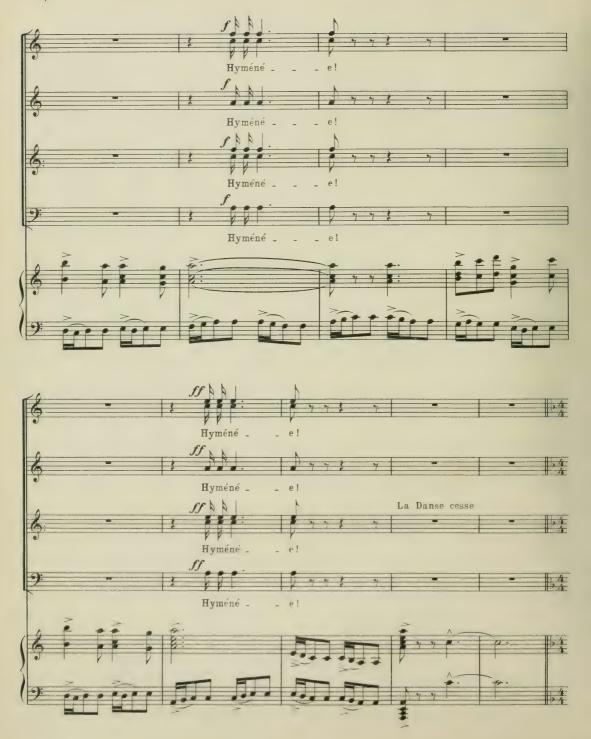

Hercule et Iole ont marché à la rencontre l'un de l'autre, au milieu d'un solennel et religieux silence. Her-Très modéré cule conduit Iole tremblante et la fait asseoir sur un trône au milieu des Héraclides. Lui, resté debout, fait un signe; on apporte devant lui un trépied embrasé, des amphores et des coupes pour les libations, de l'encens dans une cassolette. Un bélier blanc est amené devant le bûcher, deux jeunes filles portent des colombes.

Hercule qui faisait les libations laisse tomber la coupe et porte les mains à sa poitrine avec un rugissement de douleur.
